ABYSSINIAN DISPUTE NOT TO BE DISCUSSED AT ROME TALKS Only Naval Armaments On The Agenda

ABYSSINIAN APOLOGY

SEQUEL TO OUTRAGE ON ITALIAN FLAG

Italy Satisfied But Watchful

OFFENDER'S PUNISHMENT DEMANDED

Rome, Yesterday.

The Abyssinian Government has formally apologised to Italy for the insult to the Italian flag outside a cinema at Addis Ababa, when, according to the Italian version, a man described as a member of the Abyssinian Air Force tore the Italian flag off the bonnet of a motor-car belonging to the First Secretary of the Italian Legation, at the same time uttering curses on the Italians.

It is understood that Italy is satisfied with the apology but is watching to see how the Abyssinian Government deal with the offender. — Reuter.

ANACHRONISMS IN FRANCE

Schools With Less Than Five Pupils

SCHOLARS AT 4,000 FRANCS EACH PER YEAR

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday. Since the sensational revelation of the Paris-Soir a few weeks ago, that one of the electoral districts in a certain mountain province of France consisted of a single household of five persons and had the right to elect 10 local Government representatives, hecklers in the Chamber have been busy discovering similar anachronisms. One deputy addressed to the Minister of Education the question whether schools existed in France with less than five pupils. If so, how many, and what did they cost the State? (Continued on Page 18.)

CHALIAPINE'S RELAPSE

Famous Singer Cancels All Contracts

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday. Chaliapine, the world-famous Russian singer, who but recently recovered from a grave illness when for a time his life was in danger and who since his convalescence accepted a large number of engagements for this summer, has suddenly had a relapse here. All his contracts have been unavoidably cancelled.

During Chaliapine's last illness the singer lost 40 lbs. in weight. — Trans-Ocean Service.

The death of Lord Hensley, in his 80th year, was reported in London yesterday.

STANLEY WOODS WINS THRILLING ROAD RACE

'DOUBLE' ACHIEVED IN ISLE OF MAN

ALL COURSE RECORDS SHATTERED

Isle Of Man, Yesterday.

After the most thrilling race in the history of the Tourist Trophy series, Stanley Woods, riding a Guzzi, won the Senior event by four seconds from Guthrie, riding a Norton. Woods completed the race in 3 hours 7 minutes 10 seconds, at an average speed of 84.68 miles an hour; while Guthrie took 3 hours 7 minutes 14 seconds, his average speed being 84.65 miles an hour. Rusk took 3 hours 9 minutes 45 seconds.

All these three riders broke the previous records. Woods created a new lap record of 86.53 miles an hour. — Reuter. (Continued on Page 18.)

Completely Successful Experiments

SPECTATORS SEE SCREENING OF SOUND FILM

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Hamburg, Yesterday. Television experiments on board the Hamburg-America motorship Caribia, the first ever conducted on a German vessel, took place in the presence of officials of the Reich Posts, the Federation of German Electro-technicians, and high officials of the Hamburg-America line. (Continued on Page 18.)

Soviet To Consider New Plans For Disarmament

Moscow, Yesterday. — The British Ambassador, Lord Chilton, informed the Foreign Commissary, M. Litvinoff, regarding the result of the Anglo-German naval talks, and declared that England was already conducting negotiations with Soviet Russia concerning the limitation of naval armaments with the ultimate aim of achieving not only quantitative but also qualitative disarmament.

The Ambassador added that the Soviet Government would be kept

NEW NOTE TO LEAGUE TO BE SHELVED?

ITALIAN WITHDRAWAL AGAIN THREATENED

FRANCE'S DELICATE POSITION

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Rome, Yesterday.

Mr. Anthony Eden will not discuss the Abyssinian question with Signor Mussolini, it is stated with special emphasis in political circles here, where the British League of Nations Minister is expected to-morrow evening or Monday morning. His mission, it is asserted, will be concerned solely with dealing with naval armaments.

The new Abyssinian note to the League of Nations, proposing the establishment of a neutral committee of investigation, is termed "ridiculous," being further described as a manoeuvre with the object of making a highly involved situation still more complicated.

It is assumed here that the League of Nations will simply pigeon-hole the new note, since a conciliation committee is at present engaged examining the Italo-Abyssinian dispute.

GEN. DOIHARA EXPRESSES HIS SATISFACTION

Hopei Situation Improved

SETTLEMENT IN CHAHAR NOT DIFFICULT

Peiping, Yesterday.

General Doihara told foreign correspondents that he was well satisfied with the steps the Chinese authorities had taken at Hopei to meet the Japanese demands.

He said he had come to Peiping to settle the Chahar dispute. No demands had yet been made, and any action taken at Chahar by the Chinese had not been taken at the Japanese request. He expected to meet the Chahar authorities very soon, and thought the matter would then be settled quickly and easily. — Reuter. (Continued on Page 18.)

ADMIRAL DREYER'S CONDITION CONTINUES SATISFACTORY

Well-hal-wei, Yesterday. — A bulletin states that the progress of Admiral Sir Frederick Dreyer, Commander-in-Chief of the China Station, continues to be satisfactory. No further bulletins will be issued. — Reuter.

Should, however, the League of Nations comply with the Abyssinian request, it would have to reckon with strong opposition on the part of Italy, which would refuse to take part in the negotiations. — Trans-Ocean Service.

A later message from Paris states that Mr. Anthony Eden, himself addressing pressmen, confirmed that in the talks with M. Laval the Abyssinian question was not discussed.

FRANCE TREADS WARILY From press comments here it is evident that the French Government does not want to create the impression of interfering in the Italo-Abyssinian dispute. This attitude is quite consistent with the profound declarations of friendship with Italy that followed immediately after the signature of the Anglo-German naval agreement, also in view of the frequent warnings in the French press, that if denounced for the position taken in the quarrel with Abyssinia, Italy might withdraw from the League of Nations. (Continued on Page 18.)

ORIENTAL CLIPPER HOPS OFF

2,000-Mile Flight To California

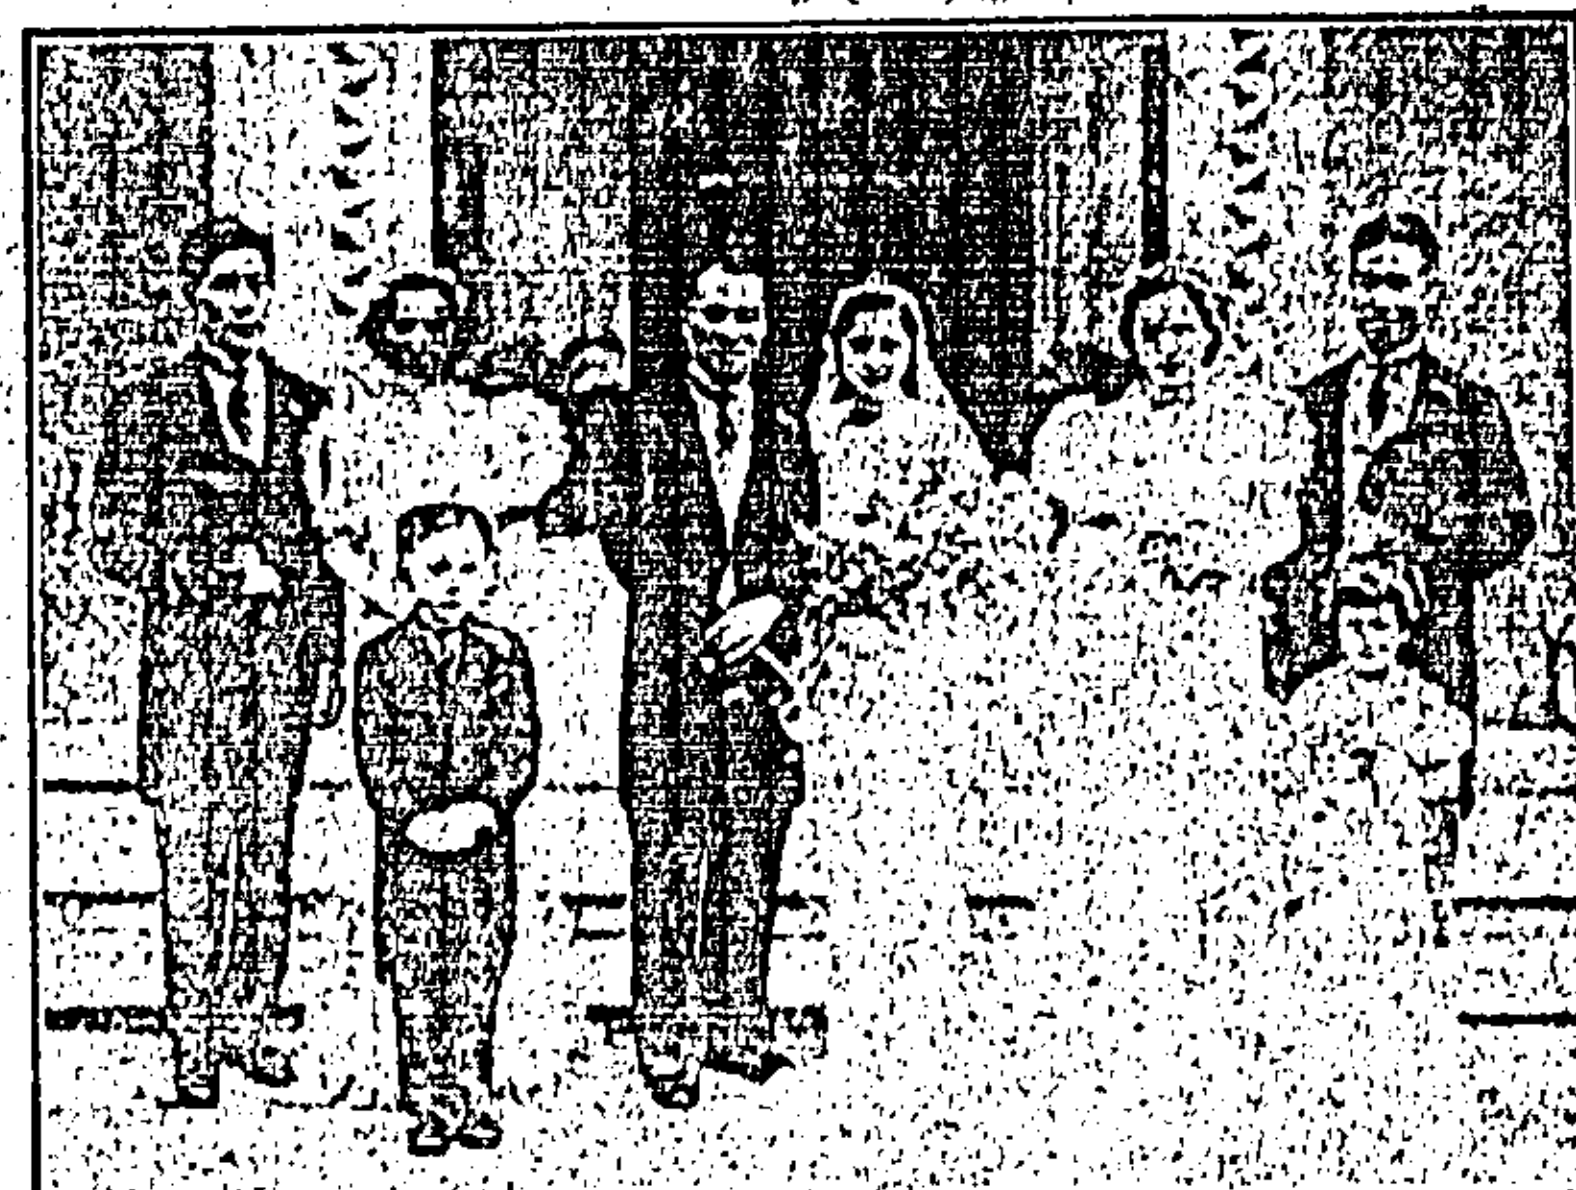

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENTS

Honolulu, Yesterday. The Oriental Clipper, the giant ocean-going amphibian, has taken off on her 2,000-mile flight to California. — Reuter.

A message last Monday stated that flying blind for most of the way, the Pan American Clipper had arrived back at Honolulu from Midway, the island air base for the trans-Pacific service that is now in preparation, thus completing a round trip of some 2,700 miles. (Continued on Page 18.)

GRAF ZEPPELIN PASSES PERNAMBUCO

Hamburg, Yesterday. — The airship Graf Zeppelin passed Pernambuco at midnight; homeward bound and reached the equator at nine o'clock to-day, according to news received by the observatory here. — Trans-Ocean Service.

ELECTION OPPOSITION TO SPEAKER

NON-TERRITORIAL CONSTITUENCY TO BE ESTABLISHED

London, Yesterday.

The question of creating a special non-territorial constituency for the Speaker of the House of Commons is likely to be considered at an early Cabinet meeting as the result of the Labour Party's official decision to oppose Captain E. A. FitzRoy at the General Election.

LONG DISTANCE ATTEMPT BY FRENCH PLANE

"CROIX DU SUD" SETS OFF

FLYING FROM CHERBOURG TO FRENCH GUINEA

Cherbourg, Yesterday. The French seaplane "Croix du Sud," which made numerous trans-Atlantic flights to South America, took off this morning with a crew of six for Kanakry, French Guinea, in an attempt to beat the world long distance seaplane record at present held by an Italian machine. — Reuter.

AVIATRIX BREAKS RECORD

12,043 Metres Reached In Altitude Flight

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Rome, Yesterday. The altitude record for women fliers recently established by the French aviatrix Mlle. Maryse Hilex was beaten yesterday by the Marchesa Carina Negroni, who, taking off in a Caproni plane from Guidonia airport, reached a height of 12,043 metres, thus surpassing Miss Hilex's record by 745 metres. The aviatrix stated that at the highest altitude she attained the thermometer registered 65 degrees Centigrade below zero. — Trans-Ocean Service.

WEATHER REPORT

A weak anticyclone covers the Pacific to the South and Southwest of the Bonins. The depression is passing into the Pacific to the East of Japan. A shallow depression covers W. China. Southerly winds, moderate, cloudy, showery, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory last night.

NEW NAVAL PACT

GRAVE DOUBTS EXPRESSED BY LAVAL TO EDEN

NEED FOR AIR LOCARNO

DIFFICULT NEGOTIATIONS FORESEEN

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

The press this morning publishes long comments on Mr. Anthony Eden's first talk with M. Laval. Referring to M. Laval's statement before pressmen, the papers declare that the grave doubts expressed by the French Foreign Minister in connection with the Anglo-German naval parleys prevented the parleys making appreciable progress.

M. Laval had been assured by Mr. Eden, the Matin asserts, that the British Government had not abandoned the programme outlined in the joint communiqué given out after the conclusion of the Franco-British parleys in London in February, but insisted on its being carried out.

Particular stress has been laid by Mr. Eden, the papers say, on the desirability of the rapid conclusion of an Air Locarno. The papers, however, predict that the negotiations towards this end will be extremely difficult, since not only the principle of mutual assistance must be approved by all the contracting parties, but also a clear definition must be found for the automatic sanctions and how these are to be applied, and how air armament can be controlled. FIVE-HOUR WEEK FOR MINERS

Draft Convention At Geneva Adopted

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Geneva, Yesterday. Draft conventions concerning the prohibition of the employment of women in mines, the limitation of hours of work in coal-mines, the international recognition of acquired rights, and benefits in the social services, were adopted by the International Labour Conference yesterday.

The draft convention limiting the hours of work in coal-mines constitutes a revised edition of the similar draft convention adopted in 1911, but which has not been ratified by eight leading coal-mining countries. (Continued on Page 18.)

SHORT STORY The Ends Of Justice

By L. A. PAVEY

EVENSON had been carried so swiftly along the current of his investigation of the Falling frauds that he'd hardly noticed, during the period of continuous excitement that had reached its peak with the arrest of Falling in the Midlands, that the rest of life was going on with undiminished significance for his fellow citizens; with the normal inevitable happenings, classed by onlookers as tragedy, comedy, achievement, failure, dotting the stream of daily routine.

There is always the certainty, not merely the chance, that this sort of absorption will sooner or later be brought up with a corrective shock, and Evenson had not to wait long after the arrest to get his.

There was a good deal of excuse for him. It was a big case. His firm had been robbed to the extent of twenty-five thousand. Falling's methods had been clever, very secret, brought to perfection over a period of at least ten years, and they had varied with emergencies that had cropped up from time to time in a way that had made investigation extremely difficult.

So that Evenson, who had been merely an inside accountant to the firm, had been very keen to show them that the confidence in his integrity and ability had not been misplaced. The last two or three months had been "edgy" work, first to secure the growing certainty that he was tracing all Falling's moves, backward, to their beginnings; and then, when his guilt was established by every sort of internal evidence, to secure without rousing his suspicious proof that would be indubitable in the eyes of British justice.

Apart from the onus that was upon him to carry out his work well and faithfully, it was an unexpected chance to make good in an unusually difficult task, with all the resulting prestige and possible advancement.

Evenson's satisfaction was slightly disturbed by the remembrance of Falling's face as, like a trapped animal, he had stretched out his hands to him and to the police officer and remarked quietly, "A true bill, gentlemen. You've got me!"

He was pleased with himself; but the first faint signs of unease grew in the course of that train journey south, where in Falling's house, in a pleasant little town 20 miles short of London, he was to obtain the further necessary records of his guilt. Falling himself had told him, his sombre eyes fixed on him, where the papers were to be found, and had added at the end, "Don't worry my wife more than you can help. She'll have enough to go through. God help her!"

He remembered that, and realised also, now that at last he had an hour or two for thought, what a very different thing this was, an errand that would kill the hope and pride of an innocent woman, from the arrest of a man who had plundered shareholders, many of them struggling people, without excuse. Less and less he liked it until, when he finally stepped on the platform and was greeted by the police detective armed with a search warrant, he was anxious only to finish his job as quickly as might be.

"Is everything in order?" he asked. "Can we go straight to the house?"

"Yes, Mr. Evenson. I've got instructions."

"I'm particularly anxious there should be no upset, you know. Mrs. Falling isn't the guilty party, after all."

The police officer preserved a non-committal silence.

"We'll put her to a minimum of trouble, officer, so long as we get the papers we want. It's going to be terrible for her, in any case. I—suppose—there's no chance that she knows?"

"Don't see how she can, sir. They didn't allow him to write, did they?" apprehensively.

"No, of course, they couldn't take that risk," said Evenson. "I must get it over quickly," he thought, as they reached the house, pleasant looking, set back in its detached garden. A husband from their train was entering the opposite house, and Evenson heard a babble of children's greetings. They were cut short by the closing of the door, but they left an ache in him.

A trim maid looked at him perplexed, but ushered them in, then went to give their names. The light was beginning to fall. At the top of the stairs he saw a nurse hurry across the landing with a child that was full of laughter at some tiny joke. He looked at the police officer, solemnly fingering his warrant, almost with horror. At the same time he thought, "Others have had to suffer for this. This is paid for with their money."

Mrs. Falling entered the room quietly and looked at them. Something in their appearance and attitude raised a question in her eyes, mute at first, then she said quietly, "You have some news of my husband. Is it an accident?"

"No, Mrs. Falling," Evenson heard himself saying, "but my news is not good. You must forgive me for having to tell you, but your husband has been arrested."

It was as though she went quite still with the shock, to absorb it, to make it her own, to conquer it. She merely looked at him.

"Go on," she said steadily. "On a charge of fraudulent conversion," he said in a low voice. "Will you help to make our task less difficult, Mrs. Falling, by allowing us to obtain some papers? Your husband has given me particulars."

She stood there quietly, her eyes slightly widened. She looked beautiful. "I don't understand," he barely heard her whisper.

Then, "You must do what is right," she said gravely.

"I may," he warned her, "have to search the house. And I am not allowed to delay."

"You must do just what is right," she repeated with quiet conviction. "Please consider that the house is open to you. I will help you if I can."

He could have worshipped her, almost. She made no protest of her own ignorance of her husband's guilt, though of that he was convinced, nor did she plead for details which could not avert a stroke of Fate she was too proud not to meet. It was as though she remembered that blows were being dealt all round her, to one and another, in a life where nothing is sure.

He repeated her husband's directions as to the papers. She was a little startled; for the first time she showed distress.

"That is the children's bedroom," she cried.

"Oh, perhaps then—" he began with difficulty.

"No," she said clearly, "you must do this at once. Come with me, please. Come, too, please, if you must." She added to the police officer. They followed humbly—in this home hers was the authority.

"Just a moment," she said, when they reached the head of the stairs. "Will you wait in there?"

It seemed to Evenson that in that short time since he had entered the house he could have bound himself to her, body and soul. He had an astonishing intensity of conviction that he had always been making for her. Yet he had brought her news of ruin when he found her. And she—she had merely looked at him with compassion, facing personal disaster as of no account.

"Come along now," she called. They might have been children she was calling to rest. She showed them the papers they wanted in a cupboard recess.

"They have not been touched since my husband put them there. I shall be downstairs if you want me further."

Evenson looked at her helplessly as she went, then walked over to the papers.

"I expect you have to stay, don't you?" he asked the Inspector. "I leave it to you."

"Yes, I'm afraid I must. In case anything goes wrong."

"Well, I'll be as quick as possible."

He sorted out the papers, laying aside for her private letters, even scraps of diary, though these he had to read first, since he could not be sure that any one of them might not throw light on

It has been said that the efficiency of a child can be predicted, largely, from a knowledge of its consuming habits.

To eliminate milk from a child's diet, or to reduce the amount suggested by science as constituting an adequate diet, is to reduce the substance from which the child's body and mind are made.

Milk consuming habits are best acquired through a learning process. Instinct alone cannot be depended on to direct a proper or adequate ration.

NEW DIGNITY IN HAIRDRESSING

UPWARD SWEEP ADDS HEIGHT

SOME PARIS STYLES

London.

A NEW dignity has come to hair-dressing styles, inspired, no doubt, by the demands of this most ceremonial season. The more formal functions of the time demand coiffures which are in harmony.

The latest idea is to arrange the hair so that ears are bared and forehead revealed. To do this it is necessary to take the hair back from the brow and from the sides of the head and sweep it to the top of the head.

This upward movement, which is a little reminiscent of some aspects of Edwardian period coiffure, gives dignity and height. This unexpected sweeping line, in marked contrast to recent curls worn low on the neck, and fluttering fringes. If possible the natural growth of the hair is followed and, while apparently severe, the style is not at all hard or forbidding. The curls and swirled roll give softness.

Paris Styles

Another style shows a similar trend, with the hair brushed well back and culminating in soft curls and single roll. One of the newest ornaments in crystal fits firmly on the side, whilst a smaller one balances the other side of this sleek "finished" dressing. Another new movement very popular in Paris takes the high upward line, but this time from a flat front. Most attractive in this style is the use of fine lacquered hair to form a strand across the centre, curling upwards into loops and bows on the hair that work into the back.

While the actual coiffure is complete in itself, the added cap or head-dress of the lacquered hair can be used as a theatre hat.

In silver, gold, or any matching or contrasting colours, this head-dress makes a smart adjunct to evening toilettes.

HAIRY FOREARMS

Hydrogen Peroxide Will Help

THE growth of hair on the forearms can be made less noticeable by frequent application of peroxide of hydrogen. This must be used in the ten vols. strength, and must be diluted with rose water or plain cold water for use, in the proportion of two parts of peroxide to one of water.

MAKING POWDER "STAY PUT"

Liquid Foundation For Make-Up

PROTECTING THE SKIN

If you have any difficulty in making your powder "stay put," you will welcome the way of making-up introduced in this treatment. It consists of a liquid foundation which, applied in the following way, effectively keeps the make-up in its place.

First, massage with skin food. Wipe off, and immediately afterwards soak a pad of cotton-wool with the liquid foundation. Pat this well all over the face, then, while the skin is still slightly damp, powder liberally.

Powdering Method

Puff the powder on freely and dust off the surplus; then take the moist pad (previously soaked in the liquid), again, and "rub" it gently over the face on top of the powder. When it is quite dry, powder lightly once again.

This, you will find, will produce a thin film, which, while looking quite natural, protects the skin and gives it a lovely satiny surface.

SUN BATHING

Expose Body Only Gradually

YOUR first day of sun-bathing, only the legs must be exposed, the second day the arms. Then, by increasing the exposed surface day by day, the whole body can be turned to the sun.

But the sun-bath should not be taken in the heat of mid-day. Before noon and after 2 p.m. are the times to choose. Nor must the sun-bath be taken immediately after a meal. At least three-quarters of an hour should be spent resting in the shade after lunch.

It is wise also to keep the top of the head covered, especially for old people and very young children. When the body has begun to pigment then the head will be better able to withstand the heat.

REMOVING DYE STAINS

Effective Method

SOMETIMES when an article is being dyed splashes of the dye are received by other articles, and, if they are allowed to dry, they become almost impossible to remove entirely. The dye splashes should be dabbed quickly with a piece of clean white blotting-paper, to draw out as much moisture as possible. Then dab lightly with a little linseed oil on a pad of cotton wool. The stain will quickly give way to this treatment. Finally wash the garment in the usual way.

BLACKHEADS AND ACNE

Special Towels Are Necessary

AN EFFECTIVE LOTION

THE sufferer from blackheads or acne should take particular care in bathing the face and should keep special towels made of soft lawn or butter muslin for use on the face only—needless to say to be kept scrupulously clean.

Beside seeing to it that these special towels are washed and boiled daily the sufferer should use only very warm water when washing the face, to be followed by a rinse in cold water. Only the mildest unscented complexion soaps should be used and every trace of the soap carefully removed when rinsing.

A very good lotion is made by dissolving a teaspoonful each of flowers of sulphur and glycerine, and a dessertspoonful of witch hazel, in a pint of rose-water. Bottle and shake before use. Cases that do not yield to treatment must have the attention of a skin specialist, as neglected acne may lead to unsightly pimples and scars.

FLOWERED PRINT FROCKS

For Both Evening And Afternoon

SLEEVES IMPORTANT

THE flowered print has a charmed life and is used more than ever, not only for afternoon frocks but in bold patterns for the evening. Afternoon frocks have small capes of the material and this copes with the old-fashioned French dislike of going out "en taille."

Long plain coats can still be worn with flowered frocks, and they also adhere to an old fashion of being lined with the frock material. Sleeves are important here. Usually they are rather wide so that the hips look slender. Many are made on balloon lines, or are wide and looped up at one point above the elbow. Sometimes they are slit on the inner side of the upper arm and fall straight down the back of the elbow. Some have under-sleeves, or rather lower arm sleeves, which take off separately and are rather like mittens.

A SMART SPORTS ENSEMBLE

Colour Contrasts Fashionable

TO be smart this season wear an ensemble of contrasting colours. A taking sports ensemble consists of a smartly tailored wool-crope blouse frock of navy blue trimmed with large pearl buttons and a three-quarter coat of white rabbit's hair, with shirring on the shoulders adding to the width of the sleeves. For accessories choose white pigskin gloves, a blue bag in the new vanity case style, blue and white shoes and a novel crocheted belt in white wool at the waistline of the dress.

EVENING GOWNS OF SUEDE

Latest Fashion From Hollywood

WHOLE MADE WITHOUT A STITCH

A N evening gown made entirely of suede is the latest fashion wrinkle direct from Hollywood. White suede as soft as velvet fashions a charming gown worn by Frances Dee. The gown is sheath-like to just above the knees, where it takes on a slight flare. A wide girde of self-material is draped softly at the natural waistline. A lei of flowers, also in suede, blended in two tones of hyacinth, outlines the high neckline in front and the low décolletage in back. A striking feature is the fact that there is not a machine stitch in the gown. It being moulded to the figure and seamed together with fine cement.

APPLYING ROUGE

Follow Methods Of Hollywood Stars

ROUND AND OVAL FACES REMEDIED

THERE is the great and much-disputed question of applying rouge. Of course, a true sophisticate has a perfect, oval face. For who could imagine one with chubby cheeks and dimples?

Miss Norma Shearer's face is practically oval, so she starts her rouge from a point on her cheeks in line with the end of her nose. Then it is worked up and out to the cheekbone, thus forming a triangle of colour when the make-up is completed.

Miss Fay Wray's face is inclined to be round, so she places the rouge well in toward her nose and carries it downward, till her face has narrowed. There are dozens of tricks to fool the public.

SUMMER FROCKS

Freshness The Keynote

SPOTS, stripes, checks are all adopted with avidity. This is a crisp year, both as to texture and as to colourings. There are innumerable whites, with black, brown or blue. Taffeta is seen everywhere, both figured and plain. Organzas and linens help to make many a summer dress, and there are all the extras, the cuffs, collars, dickeys, waistcoats, of lingerie, linen, pique, cotton. Freshness is the keynote, and it is achieved, whether by flashes of colour or by the washable fitting.

NOW...your complexion stays MIRROR FRESH all evening long...

WHEN HE LOOKS AT YOU
Like That You
Can Be Sure of Yourself

JUST as you turn from your mirror—freshly powdered—then is when you look your best! Oh, if there were only a face powder that would help you keep that Mirror-Fresh appearance!

Take heart, fair lady. There is such a face powder, called MARVELOUS. This powder clings as you've always wanted powder to cling—and never thought it could.

Marvelous, indeed, is a different kind of powder, a different blend, developed by the Richard Hudnut laboratories after years of searching for a new, longer-clinging powder.

The Marvelous blend contains a substance entirely new to face powder—with a remarkable power to cling to your skin. In a sense, it becomes part of your own skin texture.

Marvelous Face Powder, therefore, never looks powdery on your skin. It looks like a new, more freshly-tinted, softer complexion of your own! And think of it—this flattering effect remains from four to six hours. While more, Marvelous stays on without clogging the pores.

WIMBLEDON OPENS TO-MORROW

BRITISH PROSPECTS DISTINCTLY BRIGHT

MANY PROMISING NEWCOMERS

THE greatest array of international amateur lawn tennis stars drawn from the four corners of the earth will participate in the All-England Lawn Tennis Championships which commence on the world famous Wimbledon courts to-morrow afternoon. No fewer than 205 entries from 25 nations have been recorded.

This jubilee tournament is likely to be the most successful season for British entrants within the past 25 years as both champions, Fred Perry and Miss Dorothy Round, have struck their best form and have so far withstood the challenges of all-comers.

Not since the years when the famous Suzanne Lenglen was queen of the courts has there been such an entry of international women players, the outstanding feature of which is the comeback attempt of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, six-times champion, and the challenge from Chili in the person of the vivacious Senorita Anita Lizana, who has already captured the hearts of hundreds of English tennis fans.

Wimbledon will miss several popular players when the championships open to-morrow. Above are Frank Shields, detained in America by film work, and Lester Stoeft, who has turned professional and is therefore ineligible. Stoeft won the doubles title last year in partnership with George M. Lott, who has also given up his amateur status.

BRITISH OPEN TO-MORROW

Cotton Or Sarazen For Title

LAWSON LITTLE'S CHALLENGE

According to the latest reports from England, either Henry Cotton, the holder, or Gene Sarazen, the 1932 champion, will win the British Open Golf Championship, which commences at Muirfield, East Lothian, to-morrow.

Other likely contenders are Percy Alliss, recent winner of the Scottish title, Alfred Padgham, another British Ryder Cup player, W. Lawson Little, holder of the British and American amateur titles, Henry Picard, one of the biggest money-winners in American last season, and Sld Brews, the South African champion.

The touring Canadian golfers, under the leadership of C. Ross Sommerville, are also expected to take part.

The following have been the winners during the past 10 years:

1925 J. Barnes (U.S.A.)
1926 R. T. Jones (U.S.A.)
1927 R. T. Jones (U.S.A.)
1928 W. Hagen (U.S.A.)
1929 W. Hagen (U.S.A.)
1930 R. T. Jones (U.S.A.)
1931 T. D. Armour (U.S.A.)
1932 E. Sarazen (U.S.A.)
1933 D. Shute (U.S.A.)
1934 H. Cotton (Gt. Britain).

RUMJAHN TO ENCOUNTER COLLEAGUE

McKelvie To Meet Knight

PAIRS HOLDERS ON VIEW NEXT WEDNESDAY

Some interesting lawn bowls matches in the Open Singles championship will probably take place to-morrow, weather permitting, the feature match being that between D. Rumjahn, of the Craignower C.C. and runner-up to A. W. Grimmit last year, and his Club colleague E. el Arcuili on the Civil Service green.

Rumjahn has been bowling fairly well this season and fully demonstrated this in the Open Pairs, when, in spite of darkness, he made a valiant but unavailing attempt to win through with el Arcuili against the Recreo pair, B. Basto and J. E. Noronha.

Another good encounter should ensue in the clash between P. E. Knight, of the Civil Service, and "Jock" McKelvie, of the Kowloon Docks. McKelvie has recently been playing well in the Senior League. A steady bowler, he is among those singled out for future recognition.

On Wednesday, F. J. Jones and A. W. Grimmit, holders of the Open Pairs title and firm favourites for this year's title, are drawn against E. Henson and S. A. Bright, on the Electric green, and should win comfortably.

PERRY FOR AUSTRALIA

London, Yesterday.—Fred Perry, Wimbledon lawn tennis champion, has accepted a business position which will necessitate residence in Sydney, Australia. He will, however, still be available to play for Britain if selected for Davis Cup matches.—British Wireless Service.

BLACKBURN'S LOSS

Blackburn Rovers F.C. suffered a loss last season of £12,482, thus increasing their adverse balance to £19,077. Wages, bonuses, and transfer fees cost £23,596, against £3,124 a year ago.

GERMAN TENNIS ACES

Germany's official team for the Wimbledon lawn tennis championships next Monday will be G. von Cramm, Heinrich Henkel, and Fraulein Marie Louise Horn.

BARNESLEY CAPTURE

Barnesley F.C. have obtained the transfer, at a considerable fee, of Henry Topping, a full-back, who has been with Manchester United for the past two seasons.

SHERRIFF'S RINK SCORE ONLY "SEVEN"

YACHTSMEN BEAT CRICKETERS AND CIVIL SERVANTS SUCCEED

TAIKOO AND RECREO BOTH WIN

THE sudden squall which struck Hong Kong at about 1.30 p.m. yesterday was responsible for washing out three Senior Lawn Bowls fixtures. In the only fixture played, the Indian Recreation Club recorded their third home win, beating the Kowloon Docks Recreation Club by two shots.

The junior champions, the Bowling Green Club, established a record aggregate win by severely trouncing Craignower by 91 shots to 47. H. G. Sherriff coming within an ace of creating a new rink record win by beating Ward's four by 21 shots!

The Recreo, who are the Bowling Green's strongest challengers, gained two valuable away points at the expense of the Football Club, while Taikoo recorded their fifth win in eight clashes.

In addition to contributing largely towards Craignower's defeat, G. H. Sherriff's successful rink, comprising M. J. Henderson, D. W. Waterton and B. Rogers, scored the only "7-shot" of the day, performing the feat against W. Ward's Craignower quartette.

Sixes were scored by rinks skipped by A. Webster (Electric), A. F. Paul (Electric), A. W. Smith (Police) and H. H. Rose (Bowling Green).

MIXED DOUBLES LEAGUE MATCHES FOR TO-MORROW

C.R.C. AND K.C.C. "A" IN RETURN MATCH

HOLDERS SHOULD BEAT K.C.C. "B"

With the weather gradually clearing up, it is hoped to resume the Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis League to-morrow when the holders, the United Services Recreation Club and the Kowloon Cricket Club "B", and the Chinese Recreation Club and Kowloon Cricket Club "A" are scheduled to meet in the second round.

The U.S.R.C., who will be playing at home, should have no difficulty in taking both points from their opponents, but the K.C.C. "A" team, although having the advantage of playing at home, will do well if they take a point off the C.R.C. who overwhelmed them by 8 sets to 1 in their first encounter three weeks ago.

Major Withington Back

The holders will again be without the services of Capt. Manneers, but Major Withington, who played throughout last season with his wife, should very ably fill the vacancy in partnership with Mrs. Read.

The K.C.C. "A" w. probably be playing their same partnership while the same applies to the Chinese.

On Tuesday the champions of the "A" Division, the Chinese Recreation Club, should further enhance their chances of retaining the title with a win over the K.C.C. at Causeway Bay.

ARNOLD SCORES HIS SECOND CENTURY

COPSON DISMISSES SOMERSET FOR 35 RUNS AT DERBY

SINFIELD AND VERITY SHOW GOOD FORM

London, Yesterday. A CHARACTERISTIC century by Arnold saw Hampshire turn the tables on Gloucester and record their first win of the season in the county cricket championship after being led by 112 on the first innings. Arnold, who has always been considered a potential opening batsman for England, scored 132 against Worcester and 79 against the South Africans earlier in the season. Derbyshire regained the leadership in the championship race when they beat Somerset by 114 runs. Copson, who took 5 for 37 against Leicester and 5 for 29 against Essex earlier in the season, again distinguished himself by taking 5 for 15 to dismiss the southerners for 35, the lowest score of the season—the lowest in the championship series is 12 by Northants against Gloucester at Gloucester in 1907.

Copson is a fast-medium bowler, loose-limbed, reddish-haired, employing a surprisingly short run that batsmen say is very deceptive. He wheels the ball with an unexpectedly quick action, and, although flight is seldom vital in his case, the delivery whips off the pitch, towards the batsman or away, just as unexpectedly, at such a tremendous pace that it makes him unplayable.

Rain storms throughout the country during the past three days were responsible for four county cricket matches being abandoned without even a decision being reached on the first innings; at the Oval not a ball was bowled during the match between Surrey and Cambridge University.

Good bowling by Jack Mercer, who took 5 for 58, and an undefeated century by A. H. Dyson, Glamorgan's opening batsman, gave the Welsh county first innings points over Essex at Chelmsford.

Howarth was again in deadly form for Worcester, following up his 6 for 58 against Hampshire and 5 for 45 against Essex with 7 for 54 against Kent, but the game was abandoned before a decision was reached.

Leicestershire secured first innings points at the expense of Yorkshire yesterday at Leeds, Smith, the fast bowler, dismissing Yorkshire for only two figures.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF. Strangely enough, it was Smith who was responsible for Yorkshire's defeat last season, his deadly bowling in the second innings, when he dismissed six men for 39 runs, enabling Leicestershire to win a remarkable match.

Verity, who did not shine greatly in the county matches last year owing to his engagement in the Tests against Australia, was in great form with the ball and captured 5 for 69 in Leicestershire's first innings, and went even better in the second to skittle out his opponents for 65 runs, taking 8 for 28 which is the best bowling performance this season.

Trophy Races all open to the world; the Junior Race, the Lightweight Race, and the Senior Race, which is the Blue Riband of a grand week, for engines of 500 c.c.

The entrant of the winner of the Senior race will receive £120 and the senior Tourist Trophy, to be held under an agreement; of the second £80, of the third £70; the fourth, fifth, and sixth receive—

"CLIVE OF INDIA"

Difficult Labours After Plassey

New Conditions For East India Company

(By Rafael Sabatini)

This is the sixth instalment of the story of Clive of India, the first five having appeared in the "China Mail".

IT happened, however, that an hour after Clive had decided to rest, before the attack at midnight, following upon a heavy shower of rain, the enemy cavalry charged towards the grove, to be met by a hot fire of grape-shot that cut swathes in their ranks and killed their leader, Meer Mudan. They fell back demoralised, and their retreat compelled the French to withdraw from the tanks.

Major Kilpatrick, observing this, moved forward at once to seize that valuable position, sending word to Clive of what he was doing.

Awakened, Clive inveighed against this derangement of his settled plan. When, however, he saw not only that Kilpatrick's men were already in occupation of the tanks, but that the enemy was again advancing, he decided to attack at once, and he concentrated his fire so effectively on Suraj-ud-Dowla's gun teams that the Indian artillery was prevented from coming into action.

An Indian detachment which had moved out of the line on the left and seemed to threaten the British right, was judged by Clive to be that of Meer Jaffer. Trusting to this, to the extent of risking the exposure of his flank, Clive ordered a general advance, which was pushed home so vigorously that the lines it carried were those of a routed enemy.

In Flight

Suraj-ud-Dowla on a swift camel was in flight for Moorshedabad. Escaping thence later in disguise, with his favourite wife and a faithful eunuch for only attendants, a poetic retribution for the cruelties he had perpetrated overtook him at last. It was a fakir whose nose and ears he had cut off who recognised and betrayed him. Brought back to Moorshedabad without Clive's knowledge, he was there put to death.

The Battle of Plassey, a battle which in its consequences was perhaps second to none in the military history of Great Britain, was won, and won against fantastic odds with a loss of 70 men.

On the following morning Meer Jaffer presented himself at Daudpore, where Clive's little army had lain the night. He came in doubt of the view that might be taken of his dilatoriness on the battlefield, and he was startled when Clive ordered the guard to be turned out, for he did not immediately realise that this was to do him honour. But his anxieties were completely laid to rest when Clive greeted him as Subadar of the three great provinces of Bengal, Behar and Orissa, and ordered him at once to Moorshedabad.

Clive followed, to make his entry into the capital of Bengal on June 29. Attended by 200 British soldiers and 500 Sepoys, he made his triumphal way through streets thronged with the people who came to look upon this Sabat Jung, who by now was held in reverence from one end of Bengal to the other. At the palace prepared for his residence he was waited upon by the Rajahs and leading men of Bengal with conciliatory offerings, which, had he accepted them, we have his word for it, would have left him possessed of millions.

Great Day

At once followed the investiture of the new sovereign, and the occasion is the most memorable in the annals of British rule in India. For the first time in the history of that great empire it was the representative of Great Britain who placed an Indian sovereign on his throne. It was Clive, now the acknowledged arbiter, who conducted Meer Jaffer to the musnud, and then, in that crowded hall, made him the symbolical offering of gold coins, prescribed as the formal recognition of his sovereignty.

The new Subadar reciprocated on the morrow at the house of Jugget Seit, the wealthiest banker in India, and one of the conspirators against Suraj-ud-Dowla, by passing to the fulfilment of the treaty.

Thither, too, came Omichund, to collect the blackmail he had levied. The disillusion that awaited him was so terrible to him that he fainted on the spot, and while he recovered consciousness, he never quite recovered his reason, unseated by that shock. He died an imbecile 18 months later.

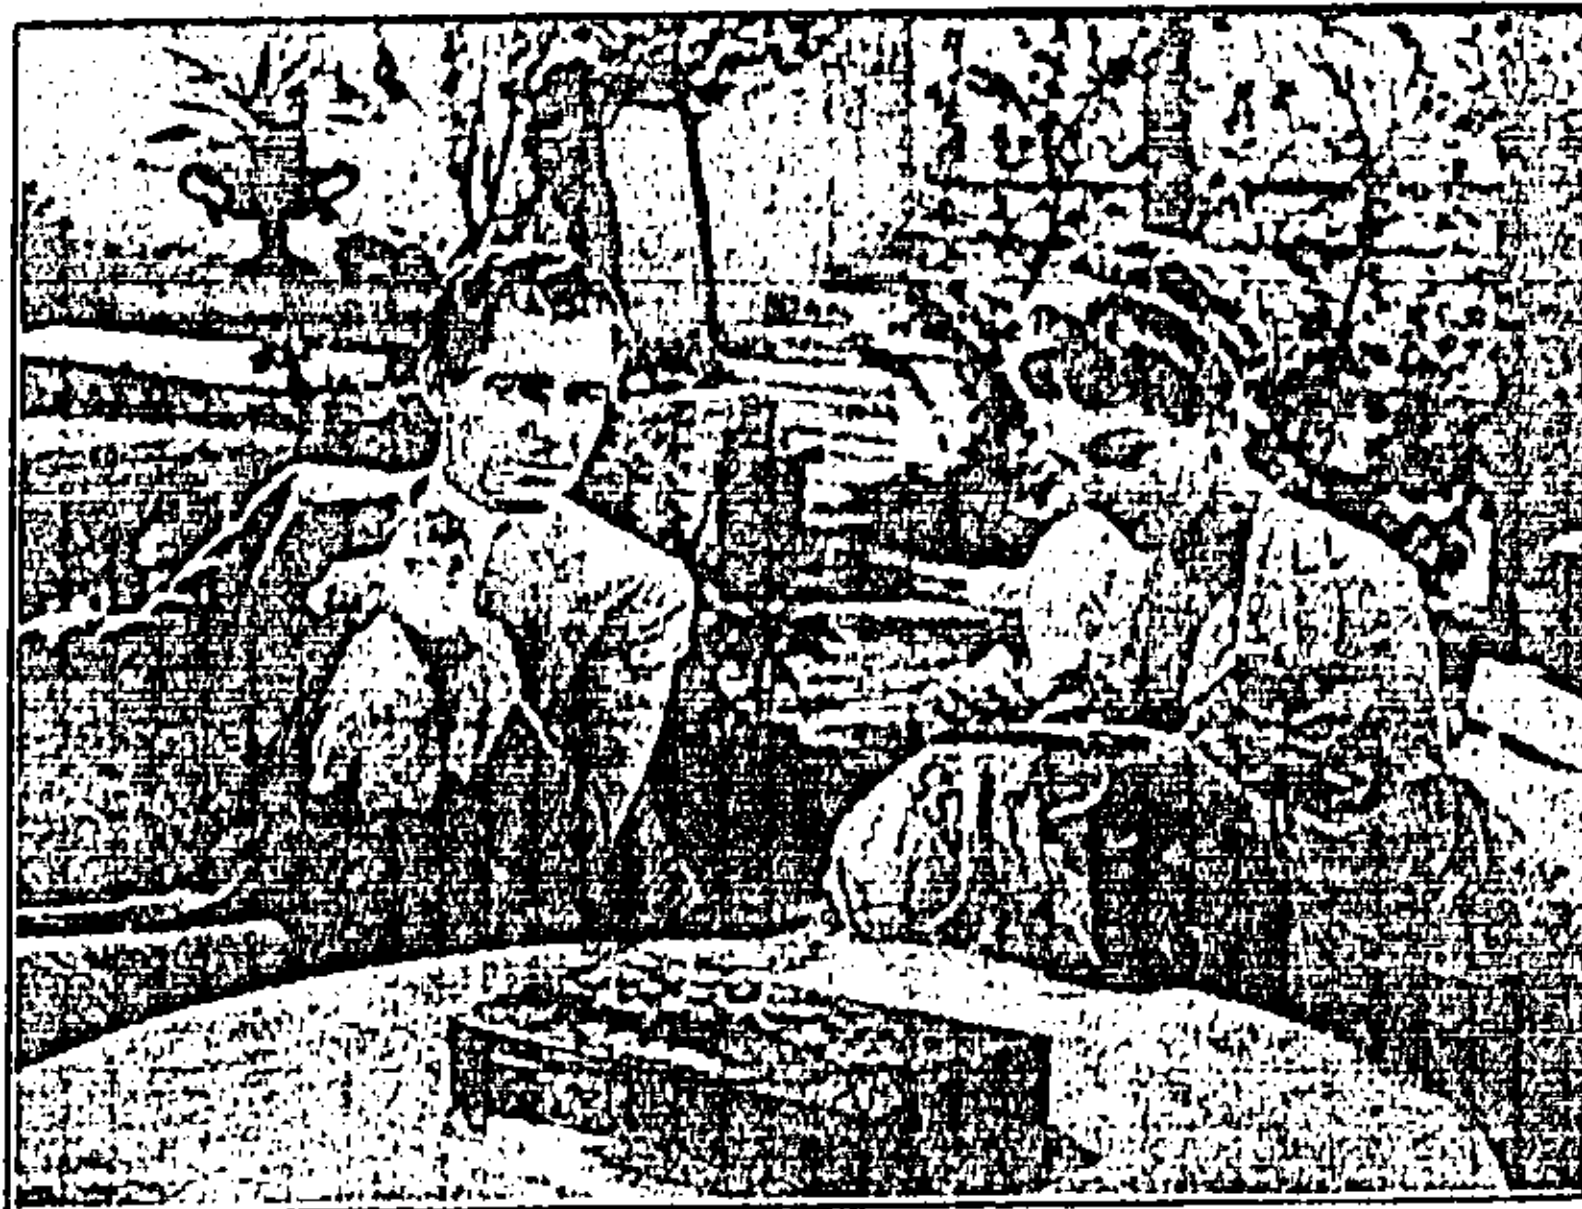

Two Sides

In later years, when envy and malice reared their heads and bared their hideous fangs at the heroic Clive, so much was to be heard of this affair of Omichund that his part in it went near to eclipsing the great work that he had done. Later still, historians have taken some one side and some the other in the judgment they have passed on it. Macaulay brands it as "not merely a crime, but a blunder," and adds: "The entire history of British India is an illustration of the great truth that it is not prudent to oppose perfidy to perfidy, and that the most efficient weapon with which man can encounter falsehood is truth."

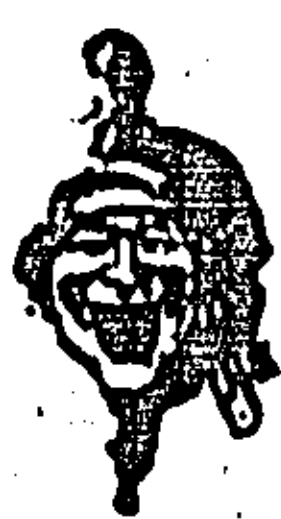

These sentiments are as sound as they are lofty. But it still remains that had Clive in this instance not met perfidy with perfidy and had encountered falsehood with truth there probably never would have been a British India to which those noble sentiments might be applied.

The "blunder," Macaulay implies, lay in that by resorting to this duplicity Clive shook that faith in British veracity which he asserts has done more than either valour or intelligence to preserve our Oriental Empire. The implication is false, and, indeed, amazing when we come to consider what was to happen two or three years later in Bengal. So certain is it that no action of Clive's could possibly have had this effect on the native mind, that the reverence and awe with which the name of Sabat Jung came to be uttered throughout Bengal were not only for his valour and unbroken sequence of successes but for his "inviolable observance of his word."

WISE & OTHERWISE

ANOTHER LIE

An old man has roamed about the Yorkshire moors, hermit fashion, for ten years, says a newspaper—probably a Scot who once lost a golf ball there and has never been able to find it.

OH, LAW!

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," says the Recorder of London. This is true, of course, but there are times when it is a good idea.

SEASIDE SILHOUETTE

"But surely you remember me: I saved you from drowning last Thursday!"

Chelsea Cameo

"Madder-Brown showed me his latest picture."

"What's the subject?"

"He didn't say."

LATEST REPORT

A new explosive has been discovered. Bang up-to-date, as it were.

Too Late?

A South African nonagenarian has just died after seeing his seventieth lion. Perhaps he didn't see it quickly enough.

"You do not seem to be suited to one another—how came you to marry?"
"Oh, she seemed to take a dislike to me when we first met, and I wanted to show her she was mistaken."

SUBURBAN SILHOUETTE

"He picked up a fine Rembrandt for next next to nothing in France."

"Oh! What horse-power?"

You Have Been Warned...

Fellow in Barcelona fired five revolver shots at a tax collector. All missed.

Moral: Always use a machine-gun.

DIFFERENCE

The independent class is one that doesn't have any breakfast unless the dependent class gets up and prepares it.

OBVIOUSLY

It is fairly evident that the judge who declared that "happiness is the pursuit of something and not the catching of it" has never just lost the last omnibus home on a wet night.

New Health for your Child

A Healthy Body
Strong Bones
Sound Teeth and resistive power against infection.

Help your child in the critical years of rapid growth, to develop sturdy bones, healthy teeth, and a strong constitution. You can—by providing him with an abundance of mineral nutrients as contained in Kalzana.

"Many children of the irritable, nervous type, owe their state to a deficiency of organic salts. Such youngsters do well when the diet is reinforced by a well-retained mineral food such as Kalzana," writes the well-known expert on hygiene: Miss Kathleen Dana.

Kalzana will protect your child against the results of calcium deficiency such as: anaemia, irritable nerves, weakness, rickets, and a tendency to develop tooth decay.

A course of Kalzana restores lost appetite, builds stamina in delicate bodies, and overcomes irritability in the highly-strung child. Make up your mind to start your boy or girl on a course of Kalzana, to-day. Children like these palatable tablets, and you will soon be surprised at the all-around improvement in their health.

FRIENDSHIP WITH FRANCE

Eloquent Plea Made By German

TIE FORMED BY FINE ARTS

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

An impressive appeal for Franco-German friendship was made by the President of the Reich Chamber of Literature, Herr Blank, on behalf of the German representatives invited to the banquet in commemoration of the tercentenary of the Academie Francaise.

"We accepted the invitation of the Academie Francaise," said Herr Blank, "because we wished to prove how much we are in sympathy with this work which France has achieved in the course of the centuries. But we also came because our nation and literature rejected the idea of a declining Western civilization, believing on the contrary in its new ascent, and considering the friendship of our two nations and still more the unity of Europe to be necessary."

"I repeat with all my heart that we want to be friends with that France to which for many years we have been and still are bound by the same passionate love for the fine arts."—Trans-Ocean Service.

AIR PROPAGANDA IN CANTON

Parade Demonstrates Means Of Defence

Canton, yesterday.

The parade of anti-aircraft equipment sponsored by the Air Defence Propaganda Week Committee was held yesterday. The total number of participants was over 100,000.

All the corps which were to participate in the parade gathered on the Public Recreation Ground at Tai-tung Road at 10 a.m. The procession then started after a ceremony and after passing through the principal streets of the city was dismissed at the Central Park.

Besides various kinds of anti-aircraft instruments there were a number of objects and pictures exhibited in the parade, depicting the dangers of air raids. Handbills were also distributed by aeroplanes.—Central Press.

THOMAS RALLIES SENATORS TO DEFEND SILVER POLICY

COUGHS-COLDS 'FLU' and RHEUMATISM

REPORTS to hand indicate a wave of Coughs, Colds, and Influenza. Many people are away from business. How to prevent a serious attack and keep going is the question of the moment. The safe and sure method for quick relief is 'ASPRO'. It smashes up an attack in one night and nips developments in the bud. 'ASPRO' is equally effective for Sore Throat—Sciatica—Neuralgia—Rheumatism—and it speedily reduces feverish temperatures. Furthermore, 'ASPRO' is safe. It does not harm the heart or the stomach. Always take 'ASPRO' according to the directions in the packet.

'ASPRO'

RELIEVES IN ONE NIGHT

'ASPRO' Much Better Than Other Tablets

MOE, Victoria.

Dear Sirs,

We use a lot of 'ASPRO' in our home and find it splendid for Headaches, Colds, and Influenza. My husband, who is a Returned Soldier, gets wonderful relief with 'ASPRO' from attacks of nerves. I really do not know what we would do without 'ASPRO', so you may be sure it is always in our home.

'ASPRO' is much better than other tablets which look like 'ASPRO', and they give such quick relief without upsetting the stomach or leaving behind any harmful after-effects.

I cannot praise 'ASPRO' too highly, because I have always found it can be relied upon to give relief quickly.

Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) F. A. BLISS.

ALWAYS KEEP A PACKET IN THE HOUSE.

Could Not Walk or Use Hands — Read What 'ASPRO' Did!

Orient, Rawson Street.

Woy Woy, N.S.W.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to you to tell you how thankful I am to 'ASPRO'. It is the only thing that has done me any good. I had tried everything, and was in hospital for months, and came home no better. I could not walk or use my hands, and now I can write, and anyone can see how I can walk. I thank the Lord and your 'ASPRO' Tablets. I take one in the morning, and I am here for anyone to see what a good advertisement I am for you.

I am asked by everyone what I have taken, and tell them what 'ASPRO' has done for me. I would not be without it. Before I started to take 'ASPRO' Tablets I had to be lifted up and down, and anyone here can tell you what a different woman am today.

Yours truly,

North China

THE attempt to follow in detail the events of the day in the Northern Provinces is particularly likely to end in the futile result which is described as "not being able to see the wood for the trees." There could hardly be a better example of that state of mind than would be the impressions of a complete stranger who should try to explain the presence in our harbour of the cruisers Hai Chi and Hai Chen from the dispatches received from Canton. He would learn that they left their former anchorage through grievances about pay, or alternatively because they were to become the private property of Rear-Admiral Chan Chi-ying; they were moved by a patriotic desire to assist Nanking to repel the Japanese, but had not coal enough to get past Hong Kong; the Bocca Tigris Fort fired on them, but was very glad that little damage was done; aeroplanes were sent after them, and dropped bombs, but these were only intended to frighten the crews by dropping into the sea somewhere near. The only facts that can be safely accepted are that these ships left the service of the Nanking Government three years ago, and now wish to be taken back.

If we look up North with the same object of seeing the wood and not the trees, it is clear that the important question is: Who is going to have effective control of those great provinces? How absurd it is to be told that a draft of marines numbering 300 are going on leave from Tientsin to Japan! One wonders who it is that is supposed to be misled into attaching importance to such news. For this is not a matter that will be decided by marines, but by sea power. There is certainly one of the parties that has studied Admiral Mahan's famous book, though it seems to be true that only the island nations have really understood it. The two cruisers, for example, will not be invited to go North unless it has first been ascertained that no warship flying the Japanese flag will bid them go back South. An army could be placed in Tientsin from Nagasaki much quicker than from Nanking. Realisation of this will save a great deal of nonsense being talked by people who think only in terms of land forces and not "amphibious" forces.

Another aspect of the wood is opened up by the fact that the appointment of officials who will be persona gratae to the Japanese Army Staff is being negotiated through Nanking. It is not at all probable that Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang troubled very much about submitting nominations to Nanking; it must be some years since the Republican Government had effective control of such appointments, or of the revenue collected by such officers. Would it not be true that the Northern Provinces have been during the last few years rather a liability than a source of strength? It is quite possible that the maintenance of order may greatly strengthen the Central Government, which is recognised by the signatories to the Nine-Power Treaty as the responsible Government for the whole of China. A working agreement with Nanking will avoid many complications with those signatories, and it is extremely unlikely that they will interfere to restore chaos.

If the forms are respected it will hardly appeal to the home-staying Englishman as a case for ignoring the principle that order is the first requisite of tolerable existence. It has always been our principle to go for essentials rather than logical forms. How careful Lord Cromer was to preserve the suzerainty of the Turkish Sultan over Egypt when he was turning the incompetent Pashas out of their comfortable and lucrative sinecures! It is one of the penalties of our history that precedents can be quoted against us for so many constitutional compromises.

If Japan should establish a firm hold over these Provinces by imitating Lord Cromer's policy, which was defined as "being in a position to give authoritative advice," it is quite possible that the Nanking Government may be greatly strengthened not only by saving much expense, but by being absolutely protected from the menace of the penetration of Inner Mongolia from the furthest North. It lies in the future whether there is to be a struggle for Outer Mongolia, but if that should be in the lap of the gods there is no doubt that the Republic of Central China and the South will be less vulnerable than if they depended on their own resources.

THE HOLY GRAIL

THE claim, if so serious a word can be used, of certain excavators, to have discovered the Holy Grail at "Antioch in Pisidia" is a quaint reminder of the immortality of ancient legends that have in them an idea that appeals to the imagination. Quite apart from any connection with historical fact, they pass into our everyday language and are used "without prejudice," as the lawyers say, when they want to make a statement or a proposal which they do not want to be taken as evidence. "Follow the Grail" is advice that is more often given to the young than to the experienced, for it means choosing the ideal "in despite of consequences." In order to see the Grail at all it was necessary for the knight to be absolutely pure; the middle aged man quite rightly takes a realist view of the situation and does not claim to be qualified even to start on the quest.

THE SITE OF THE FIND

THERE is nothing in the news as communicated to us that would indicate that these "archaeologists" are to be taken too seriously, for to begin with they have confused the two Antiochs. The little town where they have been digging was not the place where the word "Christian" was first used; that was the great capital of Syria, which was afterwards the seat of a Patriarch. But even if they were highly qualified men they would still fail to prove their case. There is nothing to indicate that the original chalice was of specially rare and costly materials; there is no continuous record of preservation that would be accepted by any antiquary in buying a relic; and it has been found several times before.

The last find was by Captain Tudor Pole, at Glastonbury. He had a dream that it was buried in a particular spot in the ruins of the ancient Abbey of Glastonbury, and he was so convinced that his dream was a genuine revelation that he sent his young sister, with two girl friends, all dressed in white and armed with a pickaxe, to the spot, which he marked on a diagram. There they found a chalice, which has been exhibited, and still is safely preserved. The legend was that St. Joseph had brought it to England; the old story that it was carried somewhere by angels and delivered to some knights is neither more nor less credible; for all the stories date from the period when men who were fond of fighting were evolving a code of chivalry to regulate that occupation by some moral and religious ideals.

QUIXOTE AND PANZA

ALL these alleged discoveries are little more than commentaries on the wonderful insight into human nature of the great Cervantes. There is in man an eternal Don Quixote, who goes campaigning under the inspiration of some fair Dulcinea, who sees Saracen Infidels in the whirling wings of a windmill, and counts the world well lost for honour. There is also an eternal Sancho Panza, not as a retainer but in the same man's own breast, who is thinking of whether he is going to get any supper, who thinks it

TESTING FITNESS FOR FLYING

WHAT IS REQUIRED OF PILOTS TO-DAY

STIFFNESS OF EXAMINATION NECESSARY

(By Major C. C. Turner)

ALTHOUGH it has been necessary recently to accept more officers, cadets, and aircraftmen for the Air Force, there has been not the slightest abatement of the high physical standards required.

Nor will the vast increase now to be made cause anxiety. A total of some 22,500 new personnel, however, will be no easy matter to arrange, for it probably means applications from nearly four times that number.

Candidates in all divisions have at all times so greatly exceeded the desired intake that many men possessing the necessary qualifications have failed to get in. The medical tests are extraordinarily strict and elaborate. Ordinary flying, it is true, calls for no very high standard, and candidates for the civilian "A" licence are accepted on production of a form issued by the Air Ministry and filled in and signed by the candidate's own doctor.

The "B" certificate, on the other hand, demands a very high standard, although not so strict as that imposed on those whose training will cost the State a lot of money, which must not be wasted on unlikely candidates. Nor is it desirable to waste the time of those who may be regarded as "doubtful" cases.

Besides the ordinary medical tests, there are many with a specific bearing on aptitude for flight. To take one of these at random—a candidate is seated in what might be a dentist's chair. To the imaginative it might suggest something even more sinister!

The pulse and blood pressure of the candidate are noted, and

At present there are 10 cinema houses in Kowloon. Two new theatres, which will complete the dozen, are at present under construction. With all these cinemas, Kowloon has not got a "talkie house" yet! We would like to have one or two.

The Paramount picture "The Love Parade" is still drawing large audiences at the Central Theatre.

Hong Kong Personalities

Mr. T. A. MITCHELL

This is the forty-seventh of the exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Konyak, the talented Hungarian artist.

OUR Personality this week is Mr. Thomas Aiken Mitchell, Managing Director of Messrs. Loxley and Co., Ltd.

Mr. Mitchell was born in Dundee, Scotland, in 1896 and educated at the Dundee High School. On leaving school he was articled to Messrs. Baxter Bros. and Co., Ltd., the largest jute and linen weavers in the world, where he was being trained specially for Calcutta when the Great War broke out in 1914. Breaking his articles to join up, he served for two years and two months in the front line in France as a private in the 19th Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. In 1918 he was sent home for a commission and was about to join the East Surreys as a 2nd Lieutenant when the war came to an end.

Returning to Dundee with the intention of again taking up the jute business, he took a six months' course in jute spinning and weaving at the Dundee Technical College, but, trade in Calcutta being then in a very bad state, he decided to try his fortune farther East and came to Hong Kong, where he joined the firm of Alex. Ross and Co., Ltd. After seven years as their manager in Swatow he joined Messrs. Loxley and Co. in 1927. To-day he is Managing Director of the firm, a Director of the Union Insurance Society of Canton and Chairman of the local committee of the Hong Kong and China Gas Company Ltd.

Seven Little Orphans

"YOU reptile!" "You cold-blooded little reptile!" But is not this a little unfair, not to the person we are thus stigmatising, but to the reptile? It is true that a reptile is cold-blooded, but beyond that fact how much more do we know about the physiology and psychology of these animals?

Two days ago a friend arrived with a match box and a sad story. He had witnessed the murder of a mother but had saved the family from destruction. Under a stone near Tai Tam reservoir a mother blue-tailed skink had been discovered guarding her eggs. Her brilliant blue tail had caught the eye of a coolie and with a cry of "Sehr", he had slain her. The ignorant coolie did not know that a snake never possesses legs—though a python does possess the rudiments of hind legs. But we cannot blame him, for many Europeans are guilty of thinking that the slowworm is a snake, whereas it is in fact a legless lizard.

The eggs were collected and put in a match box. One was dropped and it bounced! which puzzled my friend, but really it was the coiled up baby lizard inside the thin leathery shell that made the egg so resilient. Another egg was opened carefully and a streak of blue fire ran away. Finally the match box containing four babies and three eggs arrived for my inspection.

Eumeces quadrilineatus is an interesting lizard. Firstly, the type specimen was described from Hong Kong in 1853, and since then this species has been found in South China, Indo-China, Hainan and in Siam. Secondly, it belongs to a genus of skink lizard which without exception guards its eggs during incubation. Presumably the female only keeps an eye on the eggs. The three eggs I measured averaged 15 x 11.5 mm. and were leathery, semi-transparent white, with slate grey spots very like the markings on a bird's egg. (They hatched on Friday night). The baby lizards were about 2½ inches long and nearly as brilliantly marked as their mother. Tail bright electric blue, changing to green before the base and then into pinkish yellow running along the body as two dorsal and two lateral lines, on the head changing to pink, four lines meeting at the end of the snout. The rest of upper parts of the body are black, the lower surface of the head being flesh-coloured, darkening to dusky under the body.

Three Foundlings

Another friend has in his possession three baby civet cats. If I remember rightly they were blind when he obtained them and could only drink diluted cow's milk. Their previous history is unknown to me: whether their warm-blooded mother deserted them or whether, like the lizard mother, she was killed whilst defending her kittens. I do not know. They make delightful pets, and now that they have taken in part to a diet of bananas they should be rearable. The most interesting feature to me was their unusual call. Picture an expert drummer with his drumstick tapping very lightly and in quick succession half a dozen beats on, say, an inflated football, and you will have an auditory image of the kitten's call. They are the young of the Little Spotted Civet, Viverricula m. malaccensis, our commonest species.

From civet cat kittens to cat's eyes is a further cry than the words imply. Cat's eyes are the opercula of gastropod mollusca of the family Stenoglossa. In simple language, an operculum is a lid fixed to the end of the foot of the mollusc with which it closes the entrance into its shell after it has retired for the night. Every cat's eye represents a tragedy; every cat's eye is the sole remnant of a dead whelk. The cat's eye is composed of hard calcium salts and long after the whelk has decayed or has been eaten and the shell has been broken to fragments, the operculum remains as a pebble on the beach. The leading whelk cemeteries in the Colony, to my knowledge, are the middle and south beaches beyond Repulse Bay. Here it is possible to collect scores of eyes of various sizes: dyed with various colours they can be used as tokens in gambling games, where red counters represent $10, 10 cents or 10 cash, depending on the extent of your bank balance. Remember, next time you play "Red Dog" that every counter is the remnant of a gay and happy whelk. My Eye

Another cry! A few days ago whilst gardening I pulled a runner of the Moon Flower; it snapped, and a minute drop of sap was jerked on to my eye ball. This caused a blister to develop which impeded the rotation of my right eyeball in its orbit, but by the next morning the blister had almost subsided. Fortunately the sap did not fall on to the centre of the eye. If it had done so the resulting blister, being in the form of a convex lens, would have caused that eye to have become very short sighted. Any plant with a milky white sap should be handled with care, for in almost every case the sap is poisonous. Blindness has been caused by getting such sap into the eyes.

QUEENSLAND JUDGE ENJOYS LONG HOLIDAY

MR. H. H. HENCHMAN INTERVIEWED

Excellent Hotels In Japan

After a vacation lasting six months, two of which were spent in Japan, the Hon. Mr. Justice H. H. Henchman, of Brisbane, Queensland, arrived in the Colony yesterday morning from the North by the s.s. Atsuta Maru, accompanied by his wife. When interviewed, Mr. Henchman stated that he had enjoyed his holiday to the utmost and he was very much impressed with all he had seen on this his first visit to the East. On the outward journey they travelled via Java, and on arriving in Hong Kong stayed for three or four days. Continuing to Shanghai they had had a pleasant stop-over with Mr. Henchman's cousin, Mr. A. S. Henchman, General Manager of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank.

The thing which impressed Mr. Henchman most during his stay in Japan was the excellence of the hotel service and accommodation. He also had ample opportunity of indulging in his favourite recreation, motoring, while in Japan. Mr. Henchman has been a Justice of the Supreme Court of Queensland since 1929. Born at Leeds, he went to Australia very early in life and received his education at the Rockhampton and Brisbane Grammar Schools, later taking his Law degrees at the University of Queensland.

COLOURFUL WEDDING AT CATHEDRAL

Mr. Lam Chik-suen And Miss Rosaline Wong

HONEYMOON IN AMERICA

A large gathering attended the wedding at St. John's Cathedral yesterday afternoon of Mr. Lam Chik-suen, second son of the late Mr. Lam Woo, who was a well-known Government contractor, and Miss Rosaline Wong, the fifth daughter of Mr. Wong Kwok Shuen, general manager of the National Bank. The bride, who arrived at the church on the arm of her father, looked charming in white silk and lace and carried a bouquet of white gladioli. She was attended by Miss Wong Man-fun and Miss Wong Mai-lai, her sisters, as bridesmaids, and her nephew, Master Lam Tsui-chuen, as train-bearer. The bridesmaids made a pretty picture dressed in pink and yellow organdie, respectively, each carrying a bouquet of Chinese daisies.

Recent Return From U. S.

The bridegroom, who is now conducting his father's contracting business, is a past student of the Ling Nam University of Canton, later studying at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in America. He returned to the Colony only a short time before the ceremony.

The happy couple will stay in Hong Kong only a short time as they intend to return to America for their honeymoon. After they will return to the Colony and settle down at their home at No. 40 Bonham Road which is now nearing completion.

The Reception

At 4 p.m. a reception was held at the Roof Garden of the Gloucester Building, which was crowded to capacity with relations and friends of both the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. Peter H. Sin, Chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital, proposed a toast to the health and prosperity of the happy couple, and in a brief speech congratulated them. He concluded by saying "Witnessing this happy union to-day, I hope my friends, those who are not married, will not delay in following the present example."

The best-man, Mr. Lam Yu-kwong, replied suitably on behalf of the bridegroom.

Among those seen at the reception were Mr. R. C. H. Lim (Barrister-at-law) and Mrs. Lim, Mr. P. H. Sin (Chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital) and Mrs. Sin, Mr. M. K. Wong, Mr. Tan Eng-hooi (exchange manager of the National Commercial and Savings Bank) and Mrs. Tan, Mr. Kan Tong-po (Chief manager of the Bank of East Asia) and Mrs. Kan, Mr. Li Tse-fong (Manager of the Bank of East Asia) and Mrs. Li, Mr. M. K. Lo, Mr. and Mrs. Ngan Shing-kwan, Mr. and Mrs. Lam Chi-fung, Dr. and Mrs. Au King, Mr. P. Gock Hin (manager of Messrs. Wing On at-lau) and Mrs. Gock, Mr. Y. P. Ma (Managing Director of Messrs. secretary of the Men's Fellowship, Kowloon Tong Anglican Church. Among those seen to board the launch were Mr. A. E. Lee, the Reverend L. S. Nash, Mr. G. S. She, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. R. Griggs, Mr. A. E. P. Guest and Miss Anderson.

The St. Andrew's launch left the police pier, Kowloon, at 3.30 p.m. with over 30 picnic-makers on board, bound for Big Wave Bay. Mr. N. A. Mackay, the Reverend and Mrs. J. R. Higgs, Messrs. E. F. and W. Fincher, E. MacNider, C. E. Wong, G. Brown, Miss G. White, Mrs. Wong, and Miss J. S. Landolt were among those on board the launch.

"Y" PARTY AT BIG WAVE BAY

The "Y" party, consisting of about 21 people, was in the able hands of Mr. E. F. Selk, Asst. Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and among those present were Mr. and Mrs. D. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. A. Dugan, Mrs. Roskrige, Miss B. Blumhail, and Messrs. A. B. Henry, Chidlow, Ferguson, Lefing, Stevens, W. Kerr, S. S. Bernard, and A. Moss.

OBITUARY

LORD HEADLEY AT AGE OF 80

Muslim Community Head In England

London, Yesterday.

The death has occurred of Roland George Allanson Allanson-Winn, 5th Baron Headley, 11th Baronet of Nostell, Yorkshire, Fellow and Past President of the Society of Engineers, London. — Reuter.

The late Lord Headley, who was born in London in 1855, was educated at Westminster School and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took his B.A. degree in 1878. He succeeded to the Baroncy in 1913. After leaving college he was engaged in educational work and for two years edited the Salisbury Journal. From 1892 he was for seven years engaged in civil engineering work in Kashmir and Ireland; in 1896 he completed the Baramula-Srinagar road, Kashmir.

He was the author of works on boxing as well as many on civil engineering, especially on coast erosion and protection, and was the recipient of several medals in recognition of his work.

Lord Headley was a professed Mohammedan, and in 1923 made the pilgrimage to Mecca, when he was presented with the order of the Nahda of Arabia by King Hussein of the Hedjaz. He was the head of the Muslim community in England.

WAR VETERAN PASSES AT 73

General Who Held Up Russian Army.

EDUARD FISCHER

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Vienna, Yesterday.

One of the outstanding figures of the early days of the world war, General Eduard Fischer, died here yesterday, aged 73. At the outbreak of the war General Fischer was in command of the Gendarmerie in the province of Bukovina, then the eastern outpost of Austria-Hungary and now the northernmost province of Rumania, and on his own initiative organised resistance against the invading Russian army.

With a hastily thrown together force of Gendarmerie, militia, policemen, foresters and volunteers, he held a front extending for 120 kilometres for five months against the mass attacks of the Russians.

For this distinguished action General Fischer was awarded the Maria Theresa Order. — Trans-Ocean Service.

Mr. J. N. Behrens Passes In Peiping

Peiping, Yesterday.

AMBASSADORS CALL ON SIR SAMUEL HOARE

London, Yesterday.—The new Foreign Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, received calls yesterday from the Ministers in London of the Netherlands, Siam, Switzerland, Austria, Sweden, Denmark, Venezuela, Hungary, China, Finland, and Latvia. — British Wireless Service.

SCHARNHORST DUE IN PORT THIS MORNING

FINE NEW VESSEL ON EASTERN RUN

Lavish Equipment Throughout

THE new Norddeutscher Lloyd express liner Scharnhorst, which is due to arrive this morning on her maiden voyage from Bremen, has a gross tonnage of 18,300 tons. Her length is 275½ feet, beam 73 feet 8 inches, and height to freeboard deck 44 feet. Her draught when fully loaded is 29 feet.

She was built by the Deutsche Schiff- und Maschinenbau Aktiengesellschaft, Bremen, and was 18 months in construction. She carries a crew of 265.

The commander of the Scharnhorst, Captain Walter Stein, has been in the Far East service for many years. As a young officer he was on the old Reichs-Mail steamer Scharnhorst. Later Captain Stein commanded the s.s. Coblentz, which was also engaged in the Far East service.

SPEED OF 29 KNOTS

The Scharnhorst, which was launched in December last year, had her trial trip on May 3 last, and started on her maiden voyage on May 8. She is the first German turbo-electrically driven sea-going vessel and has a speed of 29 knots.

The Scharnhorst has accommodation for 142 first class passengers and 144 tourist passengers and no pains have been spared in making the ship one of the most up-to-date. By erecting beds in a few of the first-class cabins the number of passengers can be increased to 152.

EIGHT DECKS

Of the eight decks which the ship possesses six are for the use of passengers. The other two are reserved for cargo. Loading and discharging is effected quite independently of the passengers' decks and conveniences. There is a complete printing works on board for the ship's chronicle and other literature usually to be found on board a big liner. Altogether there are three libraries well equipped with 1,020 volumes, and among these are works by leading authors in English, German, French, Spanish and Chinese.

N. D. L. FAR EAST SERVICES

Excellent Facilities Offered

The first voyages of the s.s. Scharnhorst and s.s. Potsdam are to be regarded only as forerunners of the regular monthly N.D.L. Far East Express Service, which in its definite form will be inaugurated with the arrival of the s.s. Potsdam on November 5, followed by the s.s. Scharnhorst on December 10 and the s.s. Gneisenau on January 5, 1936.

This service will not only offer the fastest service to Europe and to America via Europe in connection with s.s. Bremen and s.s. Europa and other vessels of the Norddeutscher Lloyd Bremen on the Atlantic, but offers also excellent opportunities for short excursions to Shanghai, Japan, Manila, and Singapore. The steamers are of 18,000 gross tons and carry 1st and Tourist Class passengers. They are designed for a speed of approximately 29 knots.

Appearing before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, Abdul Niamat, a 17-year-old unemployed, was sentenced to three months' hard labour for stealing a chicken from the Filipino Club, King's Park, on Wednesday last.

Government Appointments

The following appointments are notified in the Government Gazette—

Mr. Thomas Ernest Pearce, nominated as a member of the Court of the University of Hong Kong for a further period of three years, with effect from June 12.

Mr. Eric William Hamilton, to be a Cadet Officer Class I, with effect from January 25.

SELF-INSTITUTED CENSORS

"Judge Not That Ye Be Not Judged"

We Must Examine Our Own Selves First

(By The Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan)

LONG ago, in the city of Rome, there were two officials who rejoiced in the name of Censors. And they were just about the most unpopular individuals in the place, for the very good and simple reason that their job was to keep a sharp eye on the lives of their neighbours.

There were many faults which were too trivial to be brought before the city magistrates, but which nevertheless deserved censure. For instance, there was the case of the man who was not being strict enough with his children, or of another who was not showing enough keenness in the cultivation of his fields. All day long these Censors were on the prowl, looking out for trouble and invariably finding it.

Human life to-day, both private and public, is not devoid of similar characters—people who have appointed themselves to the onerous task of watching for the faults and failings of their fellow-men and sitting in judgment upon them.

Reflections

We all know people who never seem to have a good word for anybody else. They are always picking holes in somebody's coat, yet we have never felt that they were so very perfect themselves. Usually they are very far from it. They do not realise it, but the faults and failings which they are always seeing in others are to a very large extent but their own shortcomings reflected back on them, as if by a mirror.

When one looks into a mirror one sees on one's face just that expression which happens to be there at that moment. If we frown, the glass will frown back at us; if we smile, we shall get a smile in return. It is very much the same with the people with whom we come in contact. They are very often human mirrors, reflecting back on us but our own way of regarding them.

Judge Not

In the Sermon on the Mount, when Christ was laying down the principles on which He wished His Kingdom to be founded, He gave a distinct warning against hasty and inconsiderate judgment. He appointed no Censors; on the contrary He said, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." And there are at least three reasons why we should be mighty careful in this matter.

In the first place, we are not good enough ourselves. We live in glass houses and therefore cannot afford to throw stones. If we are honest with ourselves we shall

CRUELTY TO CHICKENS

78 Carried In One Small Basket

An unusual case of cruelty to chickens was brought before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, when Yeung Man-cheung, a 36-year-old vegetable gardener, was charged with carrying 78 small chickens in one small basket.

Sergeant Spiers, of the Kowloon City Police Station, stated that when taken to the police station it was found that one of the chickens had died.

A fine of $5, in default seven days' imprisonment, was imposed.

in our own eye is of such a size that the most in our brother's eye is not worth considering.

Then we do not know enough. Before a Judge gives his verdict, he has heard every bit of evidence that can be procured, both for and against the accused, declared on the oath of eye-witnesses. Humanly speaking, the margin of error is infinitesimal. When we make our judgment how often do we know the full facts of the case?

Deceptive Appearances

I read a story some time ago about a rich widow who had a host of poor relations, none of whom seemed to her to be worthy of inheriting her wealth, until one day she observed a small nephew stooping to pick up a pin from the floor. Next day she made her will, leaving every penny to the youngster, who, by picking up that pin, decided her that he had in him the makings of a careful, frugal man, and much more likely to make good use of her fortune than any of the others.

She would not have made that will if she had guessed what really had prompted him to pick up the pin. For if his aunt had not seen his action and commended it, he had every intention of hiding it, point upwards, in the old lady's favourite chair.

Not many of us go to the trouble of searching out the other fellow's inner motives. We judge him mostly on visible results. If his doings please us we shall probably slap him on the back and tell him that he is a darned good sort. If we belong to the grade of influential folk, we might even use our influence to get him a knighthood because he jolly well deserved it.

But if he has done something to offend us, then let him look out, that's all. We do not stop to think whether it was intentional or not. He has done it—that is quite enough. We will have no more to do with such a man.

The Golden Rule

But don't you think that we ought to be a little more careful in this respect? It does not say much for our powers of discrimination if we fulsomely praise where praise is not deserved, or not even expected. It says less for our sense of justice if we condemn another man for doing what he never intended to do. It may have been a slip on his part. Let us make quite sure before we go in for vigorous action.

It is the custom in Tibet to stick out the tongue as a form of salutation. It would not, therefore, be in the best of taste to knock a native down if he chanced to greet you in that way. When one knows the facts, it alters the complexion of things.

The third thing is that we should remember the Golden Rule, and do to others as we would have them do to us. We bitterly resent unkind, unjust and untrue remarks being made against ourselves; let us then try and extend that principle in our remarks about others.

Examining Ourselves

There is only one person in the world whom we are qualified to judge, and that person is oneself. And in that judgment it were well for us to be as honest about it as we can. So much depends upon the standard we adopt. If it be a low one, then we shall be easily satisfied. It is only when we begin to measure our life and conduct in the light of God and eternal realities that we see what pretty poor specimens we are and how far we have fallen short of what we might be and ought to be. Yet to be ready to do so is one of the surest marks of a truly great character. From that moment there is hope for us and we can hope for ourselves, no matter what we may have been, or are.

BIG TRAFFIC UNDERTAKING FOR LONDON

Large New Railway Improvements

TROLLEY BUSES REPLACE TRAMCARS

London, Yesterday.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in the House of Commons yesterday moved a financial resolution in connection with the £35,000,000 scheme to improve the London traffic services.

The scheme involves the building of about 12 miles of new tube railways, the electrification of 44 miles of suburban railways, the doubling and electrification of 12½ miles of further suburban railways and the substitution of trolley lines for tramcars on 148 route miles.

Mr. Chamberlain said the Government would introduce a bill to provide that the Treasury would guarantee the securities issued by the company to be formed to raise a sum not exceeding £40,000,000.

Guaranteed Loans

The Treasury would determine the time when the money was to be raised. As regards guaranteed loans, they would be repayable at par at not less than 15 years and not more than 25 years. The rate of interest would be decided upon after consultation between the Treasury and the transport undertakers.

He emphasised that the fact that they had been able to bring to a satisfactory conclusion the arrangements for this great enterprise afforded another example of the benefits of the Government's policy of cheap money.

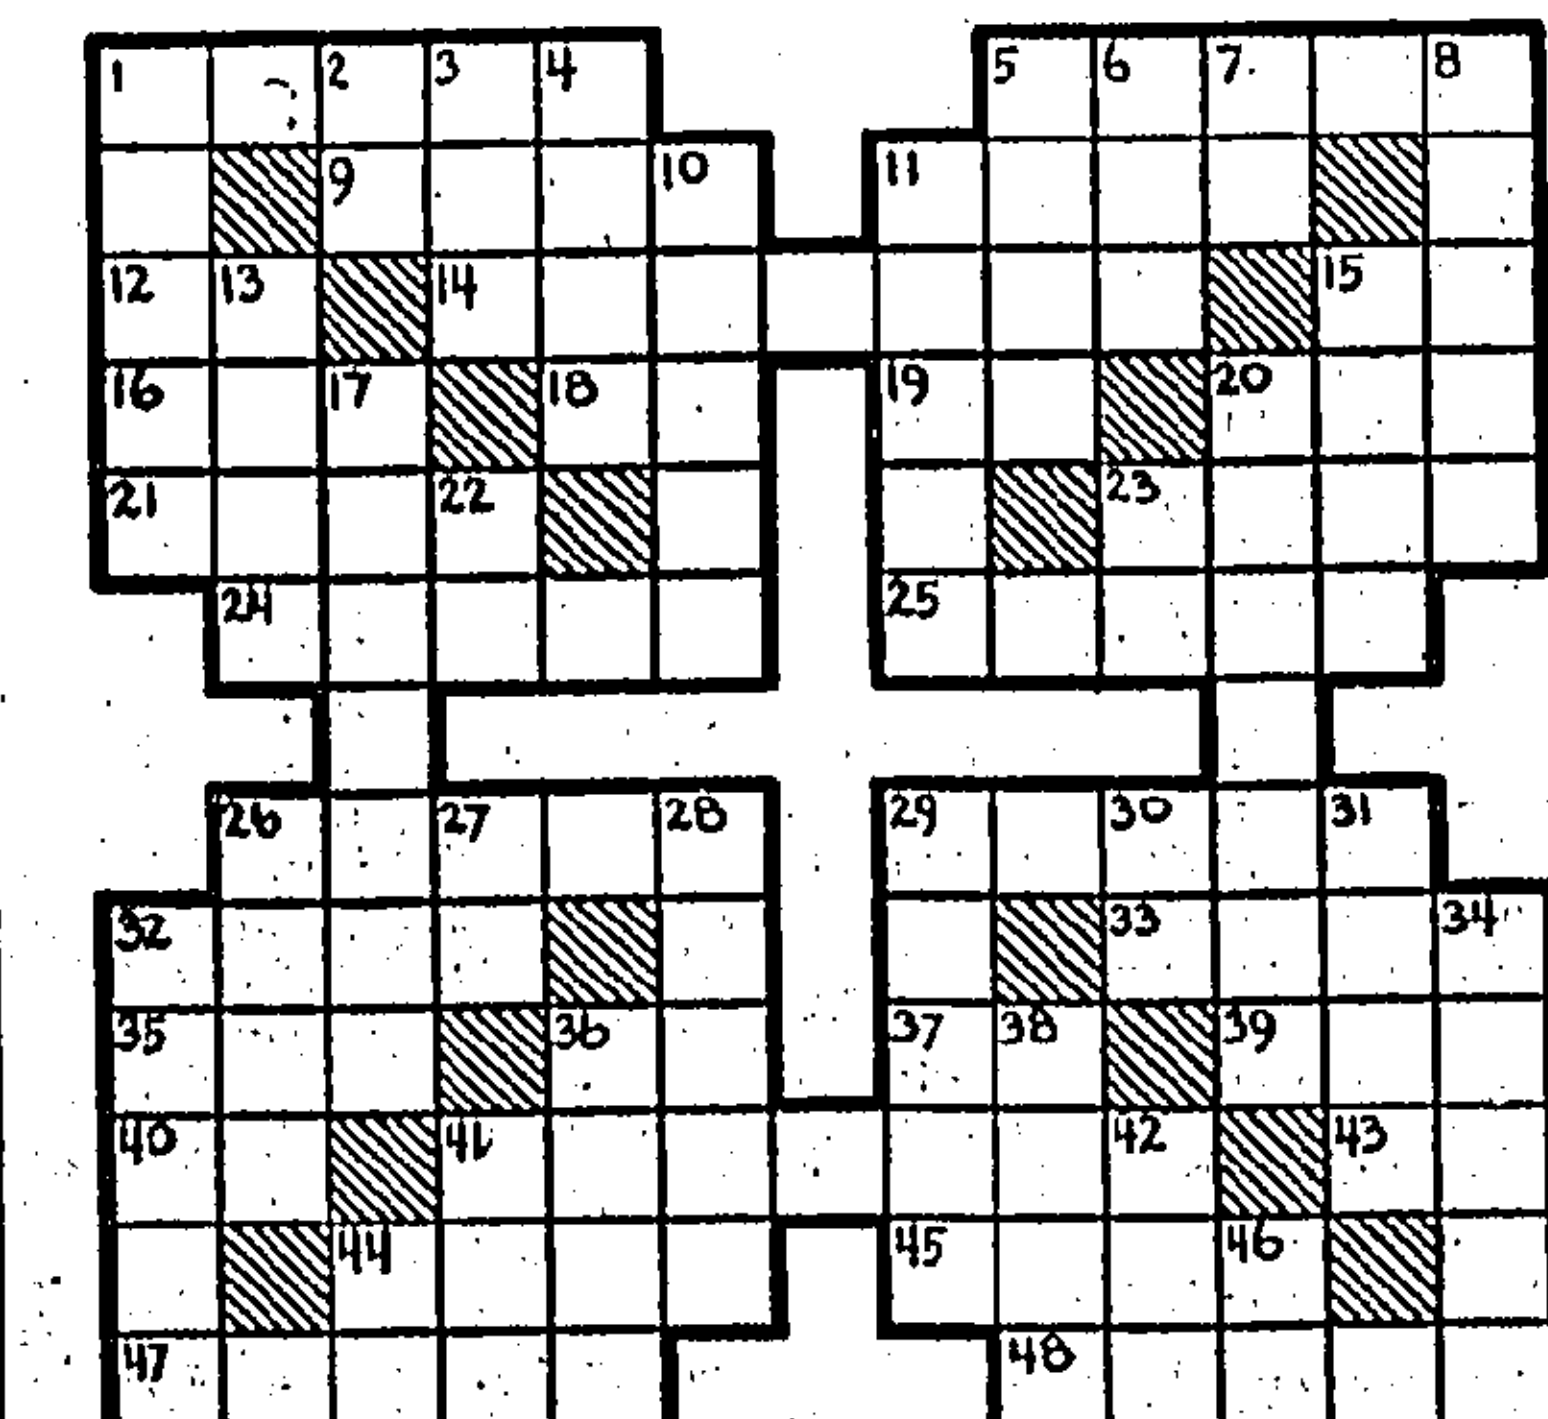

For the Labour position Mr. George Lansbury intimated their support of the scheme and promised to expedite the passage of the necessary legislation.—British Wireless Service.

BERLIN STOCK MARKET

Sluggish Trend Persists

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Berlin, yesterday. The approaching half-yearly settlement seems to occupy the attention of investors and operators alike, to the exclusion of all else, seeing that several factors which at other times would have had a stimulating effect remained ineffectual, so that the share market was as sluggish as before.

Even the substantial improvement in the Reich's finances announced officially on Thursday and the figures published by the German Institute for Business Research, showing increasing production in German industry, had no effect.

Fixed interest securities were as quiet as formerly, the prices being virtually unchanged. Call money was at 2½ per cent.—Trans-Ocean Service.

There is room in the Air Force for others than those able to perform aerobatics. Pilots are needed for the big bombers, the flying-boats, and the troop-carriers. Many who are not themselves pilots have to spend much time in the air. These, therefore, have to be proved equal to it, and immune from any ill-effects of high-altitude work.

The candidate's personal and family history are of great interest to the examiners, who, however, are not particular as to his stature, merely insisting on a leg-length in the sitting position of not less than 42 inches. There are limits to foot-bar adjustment! There are veritable giants in the Air Force, and also many little fellows; and the latter are just as efficient as the big men when it is a matter of piloting an aeroplane. Indeed, in many respects they have the advantage; they at least allow for more petrol in the tank!

The candidate passes from test to test and is carefully observed all the time. A little tremor of the fingers may be evidence of some disordered functional state. Marked tremor of the eyelids is usually indicative of a highly-strung disposition, or it may be merely the result of legitimate strain. But marked tremor of fingers and hands is probably due to excessive indulgence in alcohol or tobacco, which are strongly reprobated in the Air Force.

By exercises which suggest variations on the traditional tests for inebriety the candidate's sense of balance is tested.

The "Reid-Sigrist" apparatus is a means for testing his "neuro-muscular" co-ordination, or how quickly action responds to visual impression. Actual flying would be a surer guide, but that would cost too much, and waste not only the time of instructors but also the undercarriages of H.M. aeroplanes.

The Reid-Sigrist tests are valuable provided they are judged only in connection with other tests, for it is possible for a candidate to give a poor result on this apparatus and yet be a promising subject.

The Pilot's Sight

There are chairs that tilt, and chairs that produce a falling sensation. And there is an apparatus, known as the "Bag" method, which enables the examiners to judge a candidate's fitness for high-altitude work. The "bag" is literally a bag, and it has a mouthpiece through which the candidate exercises the power of his lungs.

Any candidate who in normal breathing is open-mouthed has but a poor chance.

Of all the tests applied, those relating to sight are the most elaborate. Not merely is perfect sight without glasses demanded, but there must not be a suspicion of colour-blindness, whilst the muscles of the eye, and, indeed, every part of that complicated organ, are tested.

Little less elaborate are the tests of the ears, not merely for hearing, but for condition of the "middle" and "internal" ears and their tubes.

The Reserve personnel are annually examined. They are nearly all ex-Regulars, and their medical history is known; but there is a new section enlisted from civil life, and before they are given practical flying training they have to pass the examiners.

The candidate for a civil "B" licence, which is necessary to those who are to carry passengers for hire or reward, has to undergo a very strict examination, for which the Air Ministry charges three guineas in the first instance.

The new candidate for a "B" licence must have perfect sight without the aid of glasses, but one who, subsequently to his first examination, begins to use glasses may be permitted to do so.

Flying Strain

There are instances on record of first-class pilots who wear glasses, and who have even lost the sight of one eye; but the Air

Ministry, although not above considering special cases, refuses to issue a new "B" licence to any who are not completely qualified. In no case nowadays can a man with only one good eye obtain the licence or its renewal.

To some extent the medical tests applied are calculated to discover faults in temperament. It is well known that there are character and temperament failings which will only manifest themselves under some exceptional flying strain.

How otherwise can we account for flying accidents which are due to failure to observe one of the elementary rules for safe flying? There are, unhappily, occasions when the seemingly perfect pilot with a good record commits a fatal error, usually through "taking a chance."

Possibly the psychologists may one day be able to invent tests which will discover such a proneness, and may even be able to cure it by treatment or "suggestion."

"CLIVE OF INDIA"

Clive's View
Clive's own view was that Omichund was a public enemy, that "every artifice that could deceive him was to be considered not only defensible but just and proper." And this view, which seems to have been endorsed by contemporary India, does not seem far out of tune with modern morality where a blackmailer is concerned.

In fulfilment of the terms of the treaty that gave the throne of Bengal to Meer Jaffer, the East India Company received a million in compensation for losses at Calcutta, the European inhabitants received half a million, the native inhabitants £200,000, and the Armenians £70,000; the company was to have the zamindar of the country to the south and east as far as Kalpi on payment of the customary rent (of £30,000 a year). Half a million went to the army and the navy, and £120,000 to the members of the committee.

In addition to these payments for which the treaty stipulated, Meer Jaffer presented £60,000 to the Council and £80,000 to Mr. Watts, who had been the company's agent at the court of Surajdu-Dowla, and who had assisted the conspiracy.

As for Clive, he was conducted by the new Subadar through the treasury at Moorsshedabad, where coined gold, silver and jewels stood in heaps, and virtually invited him to help himself. On that day Clive might have had whatever he chose to ask. He might, in his own words, "have become too rich for a subject." He accepted a jagir of £200,000, which seems modest when we reflect that for services insignificant by comparison Mr. Watts had £80,000, which no one ever thought of impeaching.

Artifice Applauded
At the time we have the word of Dr. Ives, that everyone applauded the artifice by which Omichund was outwitted; and this "everyone" of Admiral Watson's surgeon must surely include the Admiral himself. It is certainly clear that the Admiral's delicacy was not proof, now that the enterprise had been successfully carried through, against his demanding in addition to a large share of the money allotted to the navy, a share in the money awarded to the committee which had signed the false treaty to which his delicacy had not permitted him to be a party.

Long, arduous, and difficult labours of organisation now awaited Clive in Calcutta, entailed by the adaptation of the company's existing machinery to the new conditions which he had created. In the midst of them came an appeal from Meer Jaffer for assistance against the Rajahs of Midnapore and Purnah, the Nawab of Oude and some other Hindu Princes moved to rebellion by his attempt to replenish at their expense the coffers which his awards to the British had lately drained. Clive marched at once, and not only did he suppress the rebellion, but he supplied a further demonstration of where now lay the paramount authority, by effecting a reconciliation between Meer Jaffer and the Hindu princes.

The Governor
He returned to Calcutta and to his work of organisation, his position strengthened by a commission appointing him Governor of Bengal. While pursuing the duties of this office he kept an eye on the Carnatic, where the French were active now by land and sea. He had already despatched thither every man that he could spare when Meer Jaffer again appealed to him for help.

The Shahzada, Shah Alum, the eldest son of the Padishah Alimgoor II, was in Oude announcing that he had been appointed Subadar of Bengal, Behar and Orissa. He found there a considerable following and was supported by the Nawab of Oude, and it was said, by a French contingent.

The fact that he was practically without troops does not seem to have troubled Clive. He sent Meer Jaffer assurances of support. He restrained him from attempting to buy off the Shahzada, pointing out to him that if he did this he would never know peace again until he had been bullied out of his last rupee. "Rely," he urged the Subadar, "upon the fidelity of the English."

His Reply
To the Shahzada, who sought his support at the same time and offered him for his services "provinces upon provinces, with whatever his heart could desire," he replied shortly that he was bound to Meer Jaffer. And in fulfilment of this bond he marched with no more than 400 British and 2,500 Sepoys.

He covered 400 miles in 23 days; and this proved all that was necessary. However paltry his following, the mere terror of the name of Sabat Jung was enough to dissipate an army 40,000 strong.

Meer Jaffer, rescued thus from a threatened annihilation, nobly expressed his gratitude by an assignment to Clive of the rents, amounting to £30,000 a year, paid by the East India company as zamindars to the Subadar.

For Home
When the interneclie troubles had been settled, Clive had to meet a serious attempt upon Bengal by the Dutch from Batavia, and not until this had been crushed—not until February of 1760—was he able at last to sail for England, to the rest so richly earned and demanded by his health, and to the enjoyment of the great affluence which had come to him.

He was 34 years of age at the time, and he had rounded off achievements which no other Englishman has surpassed. He had given a great empire to Britain, he had earned imperishable fame and a fortune that made him one of the wealthiest men in England. He was very properly welcomed in triumph by his country, and he received as marks of appreciation an Irish peerage and the Order of the Bath.

It might well seem that his destiny was gloriously fulfilled, and so it might have been had he chosen so to count it. But there was to be need of him again, and such a man must regard that need as imposing a duty upon him.

Greedy Rascality
If his achievements in Bengal had solidly laid the foundations of an empire, it had also opened a door to greedy rascality, fomented by the East India Company's vicious policy of leaving its servants to compensate themselves for the lack of proper salaries by engaging in private trade. The consequences, once the power of England in Bengal was placed where Clive left it in 1760, were precisely what might have been expected, and they followed swiftly. The land fell in prey to a swarm of worthless adventurers, who, having gone out to India to enrich themselves, set about it without heart, conscience, or even decency.

The reports that came home of bloodshed, massacres, and confusion so increased in gravity that at last the voice of public opinion was raised in indignation.

The Company in despair appealed to Clive to undertake the herculean task of cleaning out this stable of Augurs.

The appeal reached him at a time when he had little cause to feel any tenderness for the Company. He was being afforded already a foretaste of that envy and malice which later were to assail him with such evil virulence. Their mouthpiece at the moment was Sullivan, the chairman of the court of directors. A self-sufficient man, hitherto paramount in the affairs of the Company, his self-love was offended by Clive's position at Court, by his influence with the Ministry of Indian affairs, by his great wealth and the possibility of his acquiring the ascendancy in the administration of the East India Company.

Wealth Attached
Wherever he could ignore Clive's recommendations or thwart Clive's aims for the Company, he did so; and finally, so as to clip Clive's wings, he decided to attack his wealth, quite reckless of the fact that he could not do so without at the same time attacking the honour of the great servant of the public.

The measures he had taken so as to gratify his spite amounted to an impudent and unscrupulous attempt at robbery. He had employed his influence with the directors to induce them to order the Bengal Government to discontinue the payment to Clive of the quit rents (amounting to £30,000 a year) which had been assigned to him by Meer Jaffer, and to carry these quit rents to the credit of the Company, in brazen disregard of the fact that if they could be shown not to be due to Clive, they must certainly revert to the Subadar who had assigned the zamindars paid previously to their assignment.

The odiousness of the attempt is beyond qualification when it is remembered that it was made against a man in whose debt the Company so profoundly lay and but for whom there would have been no Government of Bengal to whom the order could be issued.

[To be concluded in to-morrow's "China Mail."]

"CLIVE OF INDIA"

TO BE EXHIBITED IN HONG KONG

CERTAIN DELETIONS:

Interviewed yesterday morning with regard to the protest lodged by the Indian Community against the showing of the film "Clive of India" at the King's Theatre, the Acting Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Mr. D. W. Trautman, told the Sunday Herald that the film, which had already been passed by the official film censor, would be exhibited.

He further stated that following the appeal by the Indian Community, the film was re-screened before the official censor, who decreed that certain parts should be deleted. The film is now being exhibited in this abridged form.

SENIOR T. T. MOTORCYCLE CLASSIC OFF

ing £50, £50, and £40 respectively. In addition, a replica of the Tourist Trophy will be awarded to each of the entrants of the first six to finish, and also to the first, second, and third drivers (not being the entrant). The same driver has to drive throughout the race. The order in which the drivers are started is decided by ballot.

GRUELLING TEST

It is a test for machine and rider: a clockwise circuit of the Isle of Man. The nasty bend beyond Sully; the notorious Ramsey hairpin; through the suicidal "Thirty-third"; and round Windy Corner; the deceptive curve at Kippel Gate; the bad corner at Creg-na-Ban, where spectators are massed like football spectators; Hillberry Bend; then back to the Stand and Bray Hill.

And this twisting, circuitous course, with its angles and curves and steep gradients, its arched bridges where machines jump in the air, its "scene railway" ascent and descent of Snaefell, has to be negotiated not once but seven times. The best machine cannot win without the best rider, and the best rider cannot win without the best machine, and neither can do it without the best of luck.

UNEXPECTED SETBACK FOR THE YANKEES

A full programme took place in the National League, the Giants ascending another step in the championship ladder with a win over the Pirates by a 11 to 4 margin, Melvin Ott striking his 18th four-bagger of the season.

Paul Warner Homers
Paul Warner, last season's leader in the home-run parade made his fourth circuit clout of the season.

The Cardinals, last year's world champions, were unable to withstand the challenge of the Phillies, while excellent pitching by Brennen, of the Reds, was responsible for the blanking of the Dodgers.

Scharnhorst Due In Port

The most modern plant has been installed on the Scharnhorst for combatting fire. By decen-tralising the electricity plants and by utilising fireproof materials the ship is better guarded against fire than any other vessel afloat. A foam extinguishing plant has been installed for the first time and its numerous hydrants are distributed all over the ship.

MODERN REFRIGERATION

The Scharnhorst has six modern - equipped refrigerating chambers with a total capacity of 1,500 cubic metres. Refrigeration is effected by means of air and brine cooling. The ventilation plant is on the punkahhouse system, by means of which fresh air is constantly fed to all the rooms.

There is plenty of opportunity for sport on board. There are open air swimming pools and well-equipped gymnasiums, with sports instructors and swimming attendants always at the disposal of the passengers.

Apart from the opportunity offered for sports, provision has been made for dancing, games,
concerts, and radio transmission.
There is a children's play room and a nurse to look after the little ones.

When designing, arranging,
and fitting out the cabins, public rooms etc., on the Scharnhorst due consideration has been given not only to the ever-increasing demands of passengers to-day, but particularly to the climatic conditions encountered en route.

The whole of the architectural and decorative work in both the first-class and the tourist class was designed by the Bremen architect Woldemar Brankmann.

THE PASSING HOUR

It is time that Dulcinea should do a spot of slimming; and who goes out to dig in the back garden to find a poet's dream.

WAR AND CHIVALRY

THERE is no problem of post-war politics or economics that does not, if thought about it is pushed deep enough, come down to the question: "Are we to prepare for war or peace?" That is akin to the question: "Are we to follow the Grail or to forage for supper?"

No one who has followed closely the uniform failure of recent policies can fail to note that the reason for the failure is that each nation has been trying to play Don Quixote and Sancho Panza at the same time. So soon as the moment comes when the lance should be placed in rest for action, Don Quixote goes off to forage for supper; and when Sancho mounts the charger he makes but a sorry knight.

It may be, as many say, that chivalry is dead; it is one of the things that our contemporary writers have delighted to "debunk," and when they have "debunked" all the old ideals they find that they have removed from themselves and the rest of mankind all the motive power of human action which wise statesmen knew well how to use. It may well be that the pursuit of the Grail is no longer to be by war at all, any more than war is waged with lance and cuirass. But the old pursuit of that which can only be won through danger and hardship by those who have made themselves worthy of the chase, is a thought that is as alive to-day as it ever was.

CONFLICTING NAVAL REPORTS

The Chinese naval vessels are awaiting orders from General Chiang Kai-shek, above.

BLOW TO SOUTHERN DEFENCES

Departure of Vessels Keenly Felt

UNFOUNDED RUMOURS

[From Our Own Correspondent] Canton, Yesterday.

Although the rebel cruisers Hai Chi and Hai Shen are still in Hong Kong, the loss of these warships is being felt here. Certain reports which state that Canton is glad to be rid of the two warships actually misinterpret the situation.

Certain authorities here, it is reported, were approached at the eleventh hour to prevent the Hai Chi and Hai Shen from leaving Canton, as the intention was to take back the Hai Chi and Hai Shen for the naval defence of Kwangtung and for the suppression of piracy along the South China coast.

The failure of the Bocca Tigra, forts, bombing planes and shore troops in preventing the escape of the two cruisers, despite their grounding for over 16 hours, shows the worthlessness of the two ships.

NO DEFINITE AIM

It became known that when the two cruisers left here, they had no definite aim apart from escaping from the territorial waters of Kwangtung. The report that the mutiny was engineered only by the lower deck officers and ratings turned out to be incorrect.

The master-mind of the revolt is Commander Tang Ching-hai, who is now acting as captain of the Hai Chi. All the Northern officers aboard the Hai Chi and Hai Shen joined the mutiny except the captains of the two ships, who are Cantonese loyal to General Chen Chi-tong.

FATALITY ON CRUISER

Gunner Killed When Firing Salute

A fatal accident occurred on board the Chinese cruiser, Hai Chi, yesterday, when, in the course of firing a salute, a Shanghai gunner, Chan Wai-chi, was shot in the stomach, and died later at the Government Civil Hospital.

It appears the deceased did not fasten the breech of the gun securely, when reloading, the result of which caused the gun to back fire. The gunner was struck in the stomach by a part of the shell, and collapsed.

The man was immediately removed to the Government Civil Hospital, where he was operated on, but he died at about 5 p.m.

The unfortunate sailor had served in the Navy for 18 years.

FIRING STILL DENIED ON NING HAI

COMPLETE LACK OF ORDERS LEADS TO CONFUSION

"30 SHELLS DISCHARGED" DECLARES OFFICER

THE onus of responsibility for the incident which occurred on Friday night just outside Hong Kong, when the two rebel cruisers from Canton, the Hai-chi and Hai-shen, were fired upon by the Ning-hai of the Nanking Government as they were leaving the Harbour for the North, was shifted to the shoulders of General Chiang Kai-shek by Captain Tang Ching-hai, Commander-in-Chief of the two renegade cruisers, during the course of an interview yesterday.

He stated that the Generalissimo had not supplied sufficient instructions to both parties as to what the procedure should be. "My orders," declared Captain Tang, "were to proceed to Amoy. I had received no notification that I was to be escorted by Nanking battleships nor were they informed that my vessels would be leaving."

As both parties were in the dark regarding each other's movements the subsequent result was that when the Hai-chi and the Hai-shen were sighted by the Ning-hai when leaving port, the latter immediately concluded that they were endeavouring to make their escape, and consequently opened fire.

In giving a detailed description of what exactly had occurred, Captain Tang said when his ship was 10 miles north of Wagon the look-out perceived three other ships, apparently belonging to Nanking. The nearest vessel was at a distance of about 15,000 metres, and he recognised her as the Ning-hai. The names of the other two were indistinguishable, but he concluded that they were the Hai-yung and the Hai-chau.

When without any warning whatsoever the Ning-hai suddenly opened fire, with a single shot which passed behind his ship, the Hai-chi, "I immediately gathered that there must be some mistake, and so to avoid any further complications I ordered my ships not to retaliate, and ordered the vessels to be put about and race back to British waters."

REGRET EXPRESSED. When back in the harbour a representative from the rebel cruisers called upon the Vice-Minister of the Navy, Mr. C. L. Chen, on board the Ning-hai, and the latter expressed deep regret that he had fired upon the two ships and explained that it was due to a misunderstanding. It was then that it was discovered how each had been kept in the dark.

He explained to Mr. Chen how he had received instructions to take his ships to Amoy and Mr. Chen in turn told him that he had not been informed that the Hai-chi and Hai-shen were leaving for the North.

Another officer of the Hai-chi, when interviewed, corroborated his captain's story. He explained also that even after they had changed their course and were proceeding back to Hong Kong they were still subjected to fire but all the shots, however, fell harmlessly astern of the Hai-chi. He estimated that about 30 shells were discharged. When they reached British waters the firing ceased.

WITHOUT INSTRUCTION This officer further stated that even after they had reached Hong Kong there was still no communication from the Ning-hai. "We have had no instructions from Nanking. The only thing we know now is that the Ning-hai was sent to Hong Kong for the purpose of escorting us back to the North. We will continue to adhere strictly to the orders of General Chiang Kai-shek. We have communicated with him again, but we have had no reply."

The Ning-hai, which is moored off the Naval Yard, was visited by a Sunday Herald representative yesterday morning, but as Mr. Chen was busy preparing for the arrival of the local Naval Authorities, it was impossible to interview him personally. A staff officer, Yim Chuen-king, when asked whether the Ning-hai had come to Hong Kong on the instructions of Nanking or of the Canton Navy Department, stated that they had put into Hong Kong to re-fuel and take on more water during the course of a summer cruise. They had had no special instructions either from the Navy Department or from the Nanking Government.

"RIDICULOUS ASSERTION" It was ridiculous to assert that they had come to Hong Kong for the express purpose of intercepting the runaway cruisers or of attending to them during their voyage back North.

A similar reply was received when he was asked if the Hai-chi had been fired upon by the Ning-hai.

BLOCKADE PLAN APPREHENSION IN CANTON

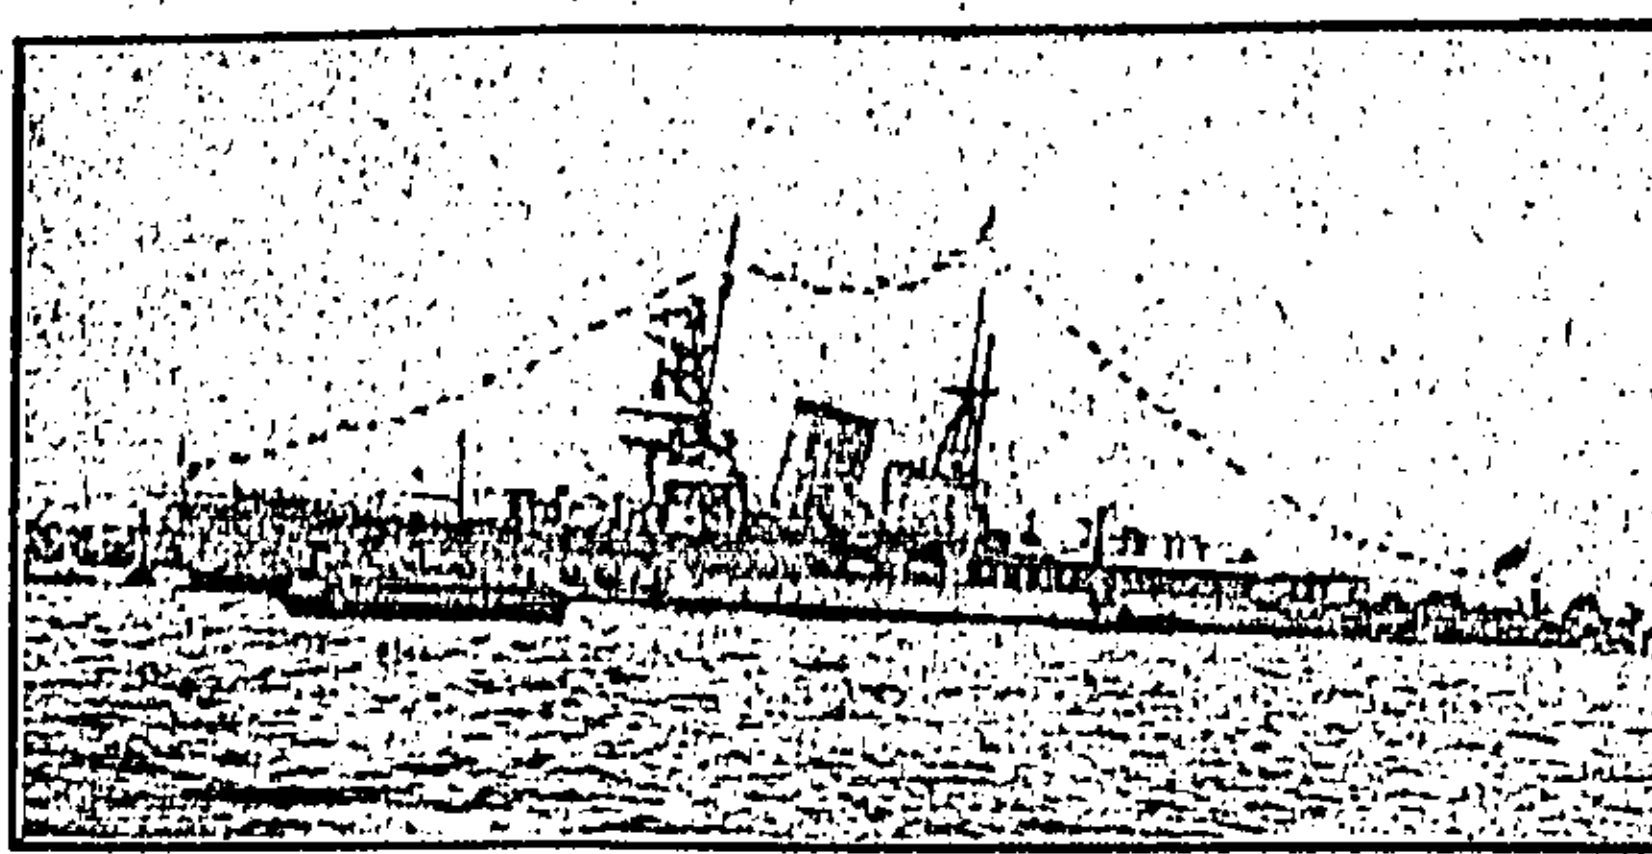

NANKING DENIAL

Canton, Earlier. The Hai Chu and the Hai Yung, both of the Nanking Fleet, are at present in Junk Bay, and there is a total of six vessels of the Nanking Fleet in British waters at the moment, causing considerable apprehension in Canton.

A hurried meeting of Canton officials was held this morning, and it is thought that Nanking is contemplating a blockade of Canton. It is further rumoured in Chinese circles that 15 vessels belonging to Nanking are now on their way here.—Our Own Correspondent.

NANKING MEDIATION Nanking, Later. The report that warships contemplate a blockade of Canton is authoritatively denied. The opinion is expressed that the Government's position is merely that of a mediator in the dispute between the local authorities and the cruisers.—Router.

BRITISH ATTITUDE London, Yesterday. Unless the British Government is informed by the Nanking Government that the Chinese warships in Hong Kong are rebel ships, Router learns that the British authorities will continue to regard them merely as part of the Chinese naval forces.—Router.

COLOURFUL BANDIT EXECUTED

SPADA FACES DEATH WITH COMPLETE COMPOSURE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

Andre Spada, the last of the Corsican bandits, who terrorised that island for many years and committed innumerable crimes, was executed yesterday at the Bastia, Corsica, by guillotine.

The millionaire Tacoma lumber baron, John P. Weyerhaeuser, paid a $200,000 ransom for the safe return of his nine-year-old son, George. The kidnapper was sentenced to 45 years' imprisonment on Friday.

The police and military had cordoned off all streets leading to the prison, so that thousands of curious people who had been camping in the streets throughout the night in the hope of catching a last sight of the famous bandit were doomed to disappointment.

Spada, wearing civil clothes and a new pair of shoes, which were granted him as his last wish, faced death with complete composure, marching with firm steps from his cell to the prison court.

He was sentenced to death some months ago after being found guilty of having committed seven murders and eight attempted murders.—Trans-Ocean Service.

ANTI-ITALIAN VIEWS IN EGYPT

INORDINATE INFLUENCE ALLEGED

"FOREIGN PROTECTOR'S" ATTITUDE NOT THAT OF PEOPLE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Rome, Yesterday.

The Egyptian Government's prohibition of the engagement of 8,000 Egyptian labourers for employment in the Italian colonies is seized upon by the "Lavoro Fascista" as affording an opportunity to attack England from a new angle.

Asserting that the Egyptian Government's action was due to "the attitude of the foreign protector," the journal states that this Power has attained "inordinate influence" since the sound, effective constitution framed in the year 1930 has been suspended and King Fuad prevented by illness from taking an active part in current political events.

This measure led Great Britain into being to-day in a position to control and administer the political, financial and commercial affairs of this young North African State.

The Government's action, concludes the journal, can therefore "not be regarded as representing the real views of the population, which still retains its traditional friendship towards Italy."—Trans-Ocean Service.

OMINOUS FIGURES

Austria's Distressing Suicide Rate

MENTAL SUFFERING HELD RESPONSIBLE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Vienna, Yesterday. Under the heading "Ominous Figures" the semi-official newspaper Reichspost calls attention to the fact that Austria is leading all the other European countries as regards the suicide rate.

According to the journal, the rate per 100,000 inhabitants stood last year at 11 for Italy, 20 for France, 29 for Germany, 30 for Czechoslovakia, 30 for Hungary, and no less than 44 for Austria. The yearly average for the city of Vienna alone amounted to 1,050 suicides and about 2,000 attempted suicides, which is treble that of the pre-war days.

The Reichspost expresses the opinion that while the economic distress has produced a profound effect upon the suicide rate, the chief cause for the rising figures is probably to be sought in the mental suffering weighing down the Austrian people.—Trans-Ocean Service.

RUSSO-BELGIAN DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

Co-Operation To Be Resumed?

"UNOFFICIAL" TALKS TO DATE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Brussels, Yesterday.

No official negotiations concerning the resumption of diplomatic relations between Belgium and the Soviet Union have been opened as yet, according to a statement made by the Premier, Dr. van Zeeland, in a written reply to an enquiry by some Members of Parliament. The Premier added that he was not in a position at this time to give any information concerning "unofficial conversations" which might be conducted on the matter in question.

This cautious reference to an unofficial conversation appears to bear out the assertions made in various quarters, to the effect that the Acting Premier, M. Vandervelde, who is also President of the Second International, has been conferring in Paris with the Soviet Ambassador, M. Potemkin, on the question of the resumption of diplomatic relations.

The Etoile Belge claims that these preparatory discussions miscarried owing to M. Vandervelde's demands that Moscow should give orders for the cessation of the communist propaganda carried on against the Belgian Socialist Party.—Trans-Ocean Service.

Television Dream Becoming Reality In Germany

Hamburg, Yesterday.—A dream which for many years has been relegated to the far distant future may become a reality next spring, when the German Post Office hopes to inaugurate a television-telephone service between two cities.

A forerunner of this revolution in long-distance communication was proved at the annual meeting of German electrical engineers here, when Post Office officials installed two telephone cabinets equipped with television apparatus.

Delegates of pressmen who tried the new "visi-telephone" had the almost uncanny experience of seeing the features of the person to whom they were speaking appear first as a shadow outlined in a window above the telephone, gradually assuming clear and distinct form, allowing every gesture and expression during the conversation to be followed.—Trans-Ocean Service.

Mental Attitude Of French Politicians Towards Reich

Paris, Yesterday.—A striking passage in an article appearing in the Radical Republicain, written by M. Paul Bastide, Radical Deputy and Chairman of the Parliamentary Commission for Foreign Affairs, throws into sharp relief the mental attitude towards Germany still taken up by a large proportion of French politicians. M. Bastide writes: "All our ill-fortune is due to the fact that we still imagine that as in Versailles, we are able to form a solid block of States against Germany to defend international rights. It would certainly be desirable to be able to do this, but the wish in this case is nothing but a fantastic illusion. We are the only nation in Europe to-day that wants to retain the mental attitude of judge of the German people."—Trans-Ocean Service.

EARLY CHILDHOOD PROBLEMS EMOTIONAL REACTIONS NEED FOR FULLER STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

(By Phyllis Juby)

HOW would we be tempted to imagine the ideal mother? A woman living her own life fully and richly, having strong interests of her own. A woman capable of giving her child a sense of security through affection freely expressed and then leaving him free to lead his own life healthily and independently. Such a mother would respect her child as an individual needing privacy to create, but she would try to guide his emotional reactions so as to reduce unnecessary tensions and unhappiness. Psychologists are busy trying to gain a fuller knowledge of the child's emotional tendencies because they believe it possible to direct and modify emotional reactions. They find, for instance, that stimuli which previously produced an emotional reaction need no longer do so in changed circumstances. A child who had shown fear at the sight of a rabbit was placed with a group of children who were friendly in their approach to the rabbit, and this child gradually joined in the group behaviour. The rabbit was later placed in the room where the child ate. Apparently the pleasure of eating grew to be associated with the presence of the rabbit, and gradually the rabbit, too, was looked upon as a pleasure, the child even allowing it to sit in his lap.

Reactions To Animals

Studies of children's reactions to animals are always interesting. The reactions are said to be positive when the child seeks, approaches, or is pleased by the stimulus; negative if withdrawals or discomfort are apparent. A withdrawal then is an element in emotional reactions of the unpleasant type. Young children show little tendency to fear animals that are still or retreat from them, but often withdraw from an approaching animal. Overcoming the fear of animals is an objective set up by many for child training. It would seem desirable to give the child experiences that build up an interest in animals. Play with them brings a realisation of reactions that are avoided, such as hurt to the animal. If by chance the animal should hurt the child it is possible to stress feeling of the animal in a way that reinstates friendliness in both child and animal.

Fear Of The Unknown

The young child is very often afraid of things that move in a surprising way, notably shadows and mechanical toys. There are strong reasons for regarding fears of this sort as instinctive fear of the uncanny and the mysterious. Bertrand Russell found that his little boy was frightened by vague, quickly-moving shadows thrown into a room by unseen objects, such as omnibuses passing in the street. He cured him by making shadows with his fingers on the walls and floor and getting the boy to imitate him. In that way he learnt to understand shadows and began to enjoy them. He found that the same principle applied to mechanical toys; when the child had seen the mechanism he was no longer frightened. The difference between fear and caution, however, should not be overlooked. While fear is not necessary, a rational apprehension of dangers is.

Very often emotional problems are developed in children before the parent becomes aware of the child's desire for independence. For example, the first definite desire to eat alone and unaided, which suddenly appears at the toddler stage, is frequently objected to just because of the messiness involved. The mother who senses the real strength of this impulse will encase the child in an armour of oil-cloth and permit him to experiment. No use trying to hold his hands while he is trying. Babies hate that more than anything and will often fly into a furious temper if their hands are held. Better to make a game of it and praise the child when he does well rather than scold him when he falls.

Festina Lente

Of course the opposite problem exists when the parent does not wait for the child's own urge for independence and expects achievements from him before he is prepared. Very well, to encourage him to dress and undress himself and train him to early independence; we should let him help all he possibly can, but only when he makes a natural movement towards doing things for himself. At the same time, in order to allow the child real freedom for developing emotional contacts of his own, it is necessary for the mother to establish a healthy habit routine in the daily life of the child. In so doing she helps to liberate him from constant petty worries and conflicts in matters that are quite beyond his range of experience.

The emphasis that has been placed upon disapproved emotional reactions has tended to make us ignore emotional reactions that are approved and that contribute to the individual's happiness. There are persons who get pleasure from very different actions and selections. Their emotional reactions add to their zest for life and to their individuality. In early childhood, where the selective responses are in process of formation, the emotional reactions that are not definitely unpleasant should not be ruled out but encouraged. Emphasis should be placed upon the co-ordination with other reactions that are favourable for development.

Affectionate Reactions

We find the literature of today on child emotion filled with warnings concerning the abnormal development of the child in whom affectionate reactions are stimulated. A paradox arises when emphasis is laid on a feeling of security in the child with reference to relations with the parent. The security seems to depend on the certainty of affection felt for him and yet warnings against demonstrations of affection appear in the same discussion. The serious danger lies rather in withholding those reactions which mean for the child a certainty of genuine regard felt for him. The way in which affection is given is the important problem. Excessive caressing should naturally be avoided; but spontaneous demonstrations on impulse, given for the primary purpose of manifesting affection, should not be ruled out.

An emotional tension and plea-

The Ends Of Justice

Falling's movements on some particular date. He came to the end of them.

"Useful," he said. But there was, he felt sure, one memorandum which Falling must have made and which would tell him more than all the rest. It would also save him an immense amount of trouble at the trial, seeing that in its absence an elaborate part of the proof must be slowly built up.

He packed the papers into his despatch case and handed it to the Inspector. "You might take charge of that for the time being," he said. He carried the remainder of the papers downstairs. He went slowly, worried and weary. How put it to her that he must search on until he had found that document or made sure that it was not there?

But she was waiting for them, and took the papers he gave her with the ghost of a smile.

"Here are others you will want," she said. "I've been searching myself."

"You shouldn't have done that, madam," said the Inspector. "How are you?"

"I told you I would give you every assistance. You can trust me," she said. An added touch of colour was in her cheeks. "If a wrong has been done, then I must do all in my power to right it."

Evenson took the papers from her. For some reason he felt as guilty as Falling must have done when he was working out his scheme on them. Or perhaps people like Falling did not feel guilty at any time before conviction, perhaps not even then.

"Before you search further," she said steadily, "you must have some tea. Yours is an unpleasant task, and I am so sorry it is necessary."

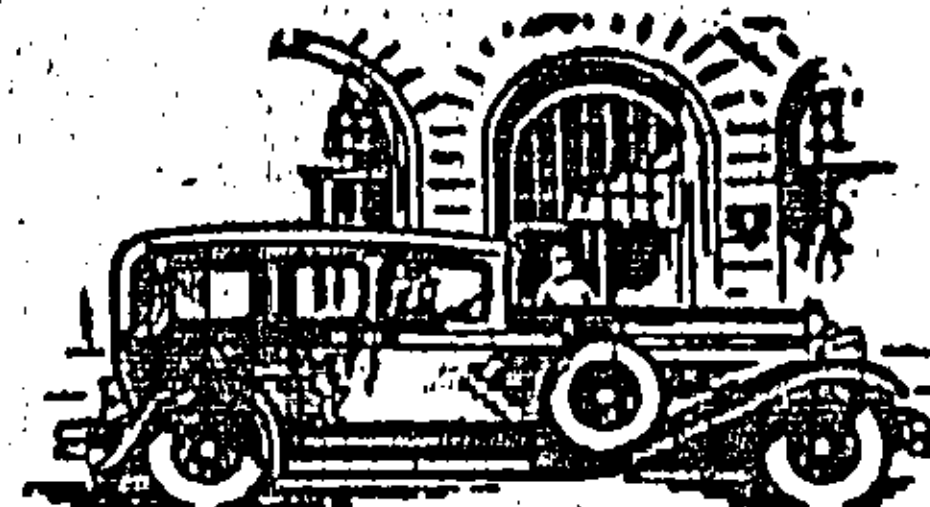

She opened a door, and they passed through, murmuring their thanks. Quite unreasonably, they felt furtive and uneasy, and sure in fondling to excess used to be thought quite right and proper in the affectionate mother. Indeed, the difference between what is right and what is harmful is subtle. Children have a right to warm affection, but it should be something taken for granted and not something to which they are expected to respond. There will be some spontaneous responses: children will like their parents for playing with them, showing them how to do new things, telling them stories. And their natural affection will be no barrier to their independence.

The Hardest Lesson

However wise and friendly our methods are, not everything can be made smooth and easy for our children. Knowledge, and the frank simplicity of parents which makes knowledge possible, can do much; but, whatever the child knows or does not know, he has still to learn his hardest lesson. He must learn to give up the possessive and primitive ways of the nursery for the more tempered social relations. Some children may take refuge in temper tantrums, while others become shy and sensitive—and their guidance is a more difficult problem. It is a mistake to conclude that the quiet, inactive child in unemotional. These stages of development call for the benefit of a nursery school or an arrangement between a group of parents for their young children to find a free companionship in play. The need for companionship can become as great as the need for comfort and shelter.

WORLD SALES OF MOTOR OIL MOBIL OIL HOLDS FIRST PLACE

Helped By "Clearsol" Process

Behind Mobil Oil's maintenance of first position in world sales is the story of a triumph of the research laboratory which has made possible the development of a revolutionary new process for the refining of motor oils.

The Clearsol process, now employed exclusively in the refining of oils for the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company, is the result of years of research by chemists and refinery engineers seeking a method to remove the natural impurities present in even the finest crude oils.

The new process has been called the most revolutionary development in the history of the petroleum industry since the discovery of oil itself, yet it is the simplest of all refining methods. Old methods, which depend upon sulphuric acid or clay filtration to remove the impurities, have long been recognised as complicated and unsatisfactory in many ways. The new process uses two solvents, which are mutually insoluble and have no chemical effect upon the materials which they dissolve. They remove the impurities physically just as water might be used to separate sugar from sand.

Perfect Contribution

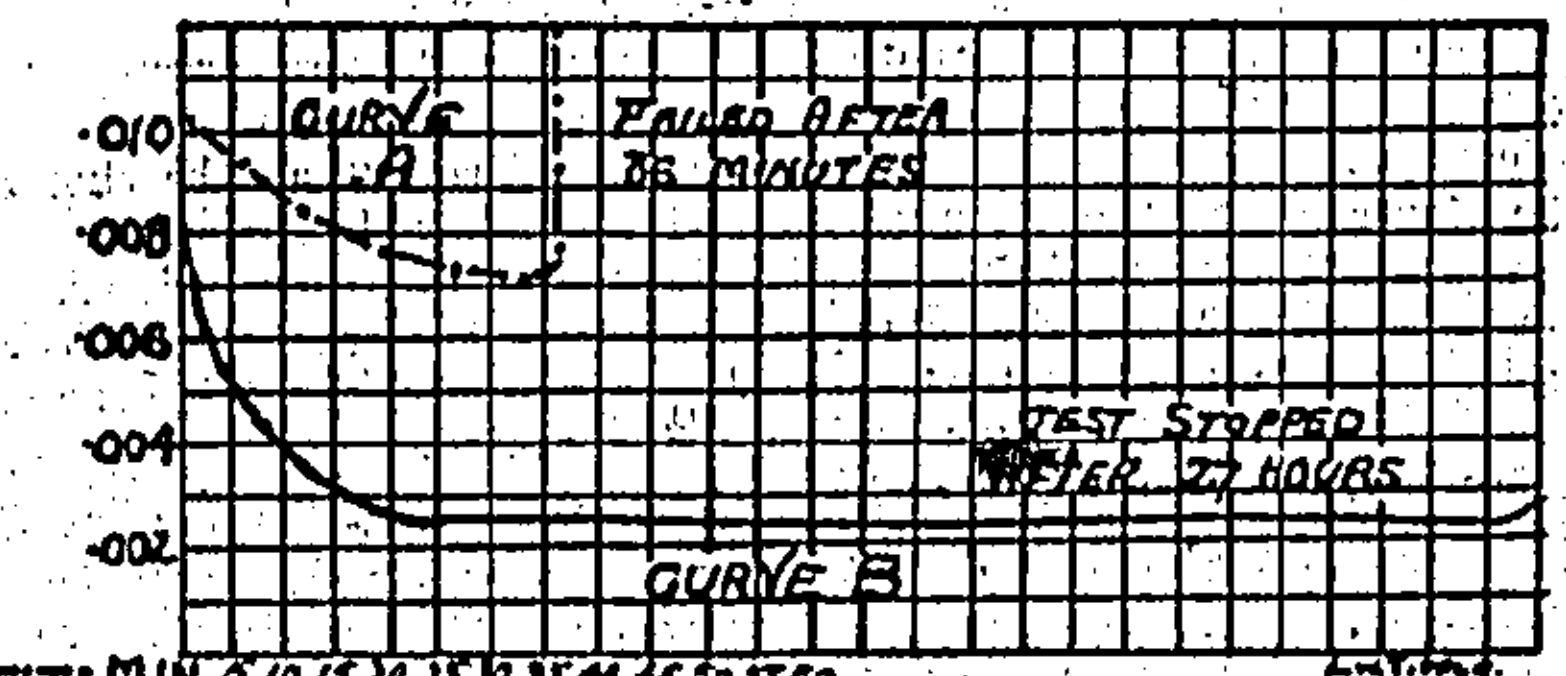

Automotive engineers point out that the Clearsol process should not be confused with methods adopted by some refiners to inhibit oxidation, or slow up the rate at which sludge, gum and carbon deposits are formed in the motor, by adding certain substances to the refined oil. The Clearsol process adds nothing to the refined oil which may later break down under continued operation of the engine, but effectively removes the deleterious substances which are readily oxidised.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

A Choice Of Opening Bids

By Lieut-Col. H.M. Beasley

DOES your hand give you a choice of two opening bids? If so, what are the factors which should influence your decision in selecting your opening bid?

Whenever you are considering what would be your best opening bid, you must endeavour to anticipate the various responses which your partner may give and be prepared for any one of them. You must therefore look well ahead and select the opening bid which will facilitate the development of the bidding.

Hands containing two four-card suits and sometimes three four-card suits frequently present a difficulty.

Hands which contain two four-card suits may be one of the following types:

- (a) Two major suits.
- (b) Two minor suits.
- (c) A major and a minor suit.

The first type (a) does not present much difficulty, and as a general rule the higher ranking suit should be selected, unless there is considerable disparity in the honour strength.

It is possible that the lower ranking suit may be much the stronger of the two. Here are examples of hands, each containing two four-card major suits:

- (1) S—A Q 6 2 A K 6 2
H—A K Q 10 A K 7 4
D—9 7 3 9 7 3
C—J 4 J 4
- (2) S—A Q 6 2 A K 6 2
H—A K Q 10 A K 7 4
D—9 7 3 9 7 3
C—J 4 J 4

With hand (1) it would be better to open the bidding with one Heart. If you open with one Heart and your partner makes a response, you can afford to rebid your Hearts and play the hand in a contract of two Hearts, even if your partner holds only two little ones. Should your partner subsequently make another bid, you can then show your Spades on the third round of bidding, if it appears advisable to do so.

If you open the bidding with one Spade, it would be difficult for you during the subsequent bidding to impress upon your partner the fact that you much prefer to play the hand in Hearts. With hand (2), where both suits are of equal strength, it is preferable to open the bidding with one Spade. If your partner responds with one No Trump, you can leave the bid in one No Trump or bid two Hearts if you wish. If your partner is one of those players who gives a No Trump response on a very moderate hand, it is probably more advisable to pass than to show your Heart suit. The response may be either two Clubs or two Diamonds. In either case you would then bid two Hearts.

Now let us take type (b)—two minor suits:

- (1) S—7 4
H—10 8 3
D—K Q 10 8
C—A K J 7
- (2) S—7 4
H—10 8 3
D—K Q 10 8
C—A K J 7

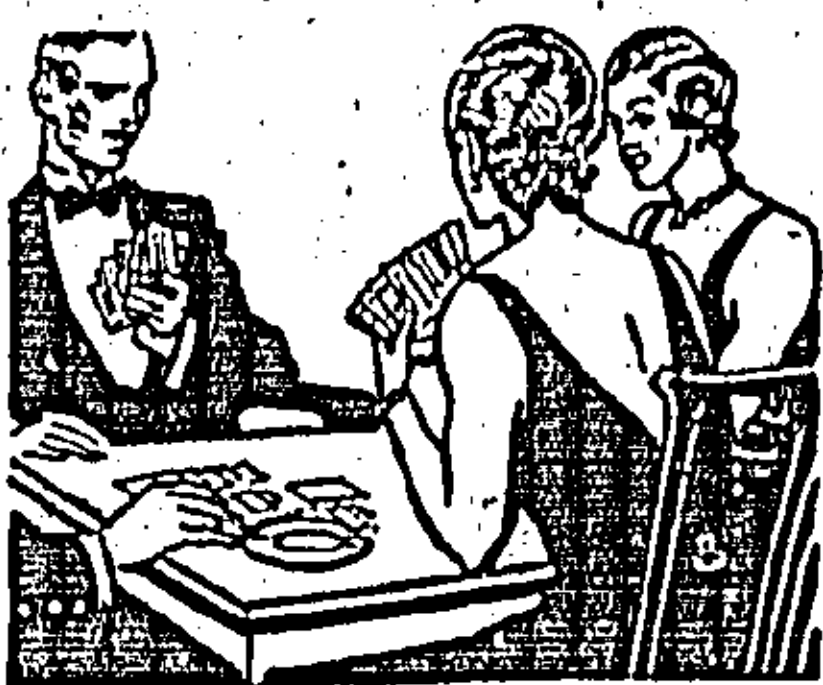

You should open the bidding with one Diamond. If the response is one Heart or one Spade, I should bid one No Trump. If the response is one No Trump, I should pass.

As for type (c)—a major and a minor suit—you might hold hands of the following nature—containing Hearts and Diamonds. Here are two examples:

- (1) S—7 4
H—A Q 9 6 H—A Q 9 6
D—K Q J 7 D—K Q J 7
C—10 8 3 C—7 4
- (2) S—7 4
H—A Q 9 6 H—A Q 9 6
D—K Q J 7 D—K Q J 7
C—10 8 3 C—7 4

Note that hand (1) contains two small Spades and three small Clubs. With this hand I would open the bidding with one Diamond. If the response is two Clubs, I then bid two Hearts. My partner will grasp that as I have opened originally with one Diamond, my Heart suit cannot be very strong. If the response is one Spade, I can then bid one No Trump. If the response is one No Trump, I can pass.

Example (2) differs from example (1) inasmuch as the hand contains three small Spades and two small Clubs. With this hand I would open the bidding with one Heart in preference to one Diamond. If the response is one No Trump, I pass; if the response is two Clubs, I then bid two Diamonds. If the response is one Spade, I am in a good position, coachwork parts, such as door as I hold three Trumps. I can then either pass or bid one No Trump, and in the event of any intervening bid I could raise my bid to two. Spades without running very great risk.

A somewhat similar situation arises if the suits are Spades and Diamonds:

- (1) S—A Q 9 6 A Q 9 6
H—7 4 10 8 3
D—K Q J 7 K Q J 7
C—10 8 3 7 4
- (2) S—A Q 9 6 A Q 9 6
H—7 4 10 8 3
D—K Q J 7 K Q J 7
C—10 8 3 7 4

With hand (1), which contains only 2 little Hearts, I prefer to open the bidding with 1 Diamond, and if my partner responds with 1 Heart, I can then call 1 Spade. However, if I hold hand (2), which contains 3 Hearts, I prefer to open the bidding with 1 Spade.

ENGINE LUBRICATION

graphoid surface will provide sufficient greasiness to prevent seizure for quite a long period.

Running-in compounds, consisting of oil carrying colloidal graphite, can be obtained for addition to the lubricant in the sump. Preferably, the oil carrying the graphite should be of a similar kind to that used normally in the engine. Thus, with few exceptions, the running-in compound is a straight mineral oil and will give the best results when mixed with a similar "straight" lubricant.

Depends On Driver

A new engine can be overloaded both by excessive speed and by too free a use of the throttle. Both these faults should be avoided by the driver, but, on the other hand, if he is too kind to the mechanism, he will prolong the running-in period to an undue extent. The great point to remember is that it is excessive temperatures which result in harm; thus, while a short burst at full speed will cause no damage, and will, indeed help to free the engine, a prolonged run at full throttle may easily result in seizure or bearing failure.

Upper cylinder lubricants mixed with the fuel are being used by many thousands of motorists, and most of these contain a proportion of colloidal graphite. In a desire to limit oil consumption many designers have resorted to the use of very stiff piston rings, with the result that piston lubrication is often inadequate. Furthermore, as already mentioned, very little oil reaches the bores during the first few minutes after a cold start. Consequently, there is much to be said for the idea of introducing a lubricant with the fuel, although the quantities which can be used are necessarily small. An excess of lubricant would, of course, tend to give trouble with sparking plugs and carbon deposits.

Upper Cylinder Lubrication Colloidal graphite is particularly suitable for upper cylinder lubrication, owing to its resistance to heat, its affinity for oil and its ability to form a film over metal surfaces. In some cases it is also found to have a beneficial effect in keeping the valves working freely.

As already mentioned, oils containing colloidal graphite can also be employed in the gearbox and back axle. Another application is to the penetrating oils now so largely used for lubricating leaf springs. After cleaning accumulations of mud from the spring leaves, it is only necessary to spray them with lubricants of this type, the penetrating qualities of which enable them to find their way between the metal surfaces. Similar oils are of value for lubricating hinges and locks, while they can also be spread around body mounting bolts if these are producing squeaks.

though Evenson felt that he could not keep his eyes from her face, he was intensely relieved when she left them. He answered some remarks of the inspector in hardly more than monosyllables.

When Evenson examined the papers Mrs. Falling had given him he discovered there the key of Falling's system, the existence of which he had felt so certain. But instead of triumph he felt a peculiar depression. With the inspector's help he searched the remaining rooms, but he found nothing of importance.

Ready to go, they asked the maid to inform her mistress, and stood waiting in the room in which she had first received them. Evenson, in spite of his success, felt like a defeated man. "I must thank you for the consideration you have shown me," she said. "I take it," she added, "it will now be possible for my husband to write me. Perhaps I may write him?"

The inspector gave her Falling's prison address with a queer deference.

"Just one other thing," she said diffidently, then looked at them with a smile that had in it what might almost have been a flash of gaiety. "If all my husband's money is wanted to put this right, as I expect it will be, I have about £2,000 of my own which you may use. It is not much, but it may help. And if there is any other way in which I can assist you at any time, please let me know."

She went to the door and stood listening. "The children are excited at being moved," she said. "I must leave you now, and see that they go to sleep. Good night."

She shook hands with them frankly, with a grave smile. Evenson looked at her mutely before he turned away. Inevitably now as was Falling's end, shamefully as he had brought ruin on his family, he knew now that this woman's spirit could never be broken. It was proof against all that men could do. He lingered a few moments, but found no other word to say. He wondered if his eyes could have betrayed any sign of the adoration that was in his heart. They reached the door, went through and heard the door shut softly. Was it a man that Evenson heard as he turned away to the inspector's car? He could not be sure. He sat there as the car moved away, exhausted, bereft emotion, longing only for the end of this day.

THE END.

WORLD SALES OF MOTOR OIL

The addition of materials such as the metallic substances used by some refiners has been shown by automotive engineers to have no effect, beneficial or otherwise, on the viscosity temperature curve of the oil. Tests have shown that inhibitors, which are added to make up for the failure of the refining process to remove the readily oxidized impurities, lose their value after the engine is in operation for prolonged periods. The metallic substances are apt to permit of the accumulation of incombustible ash in the combustion chambers of engines.

Better Lubrication Use of the Clearosol process to "wash" the carbon and gum-forming impurities from the crude oil has resulted in the production of a refined oil which insures the motorist reduced oil consumption, better lubrication, easier and quicker starting at low temperatures, and substantial freedom from sludge, gum and carbon-forming deposits. The introduction of Mobiloil refined by the Clearosol process increased sales in the United States from 20 to 60 per cent. Similar increases have been reported throughout the world as the new oil has made its appearance and been tried in the motor-cars of millions of motorists.

JAPANESE AGGRESSION DENOUNCED

MASS MEETING IN CANTON

UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS' STRONG PROTESTS

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.
Urging the nation to take effective steps to ward off Japanese aggression, the faculty and students of Sun Yat-sen University held a mass meeting in the grounds of the institution at 1 p.m. to-day and passed a resolution calling upon the people to unite in facing a common foe.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. Wu Kang, Dean of the College of Arts. Japanese attempts to carve North China from the country were hotly denounced by several professors, most of whom are Northerners educated in Japan. Middle-school teachers also spoke and condemned the Japanese action in North China in no uncertain terms. All those present at the meeting rallied to the support of Chancellor Chou Lu in this patriotic endeavour.

The professors deplored the silence on the part of the people and public bodies towards Japanese efforts to colonise North China and pointed out that it was their duty to arouse public opinion on the danger of a Japanese domination of China.

The Japanese demand for the abolition of the Kuomintang organs in Hopi province and the removal of high Chinese officials means that North China is no longer a part of the country, said a circular telegram issued by the professors yesterday. The destruction of the Kuomintang cannot be tolerated by the professors, who are teaching in a university founded by and in memorial of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Kuomintang.

Stanley Woods, riding a Guzzi machine, also won the Junior event last Thursday, for the seventh time. His average speed on that occasion was 71.46 miles an hour.

He has previously won both the Junior and Senior events on many occasions, his previous mounts generally being Nortons. He was an official tester for the Norton company for many years.

An earlier report stated that the race had been postponed owing to bad visibility.

have only one pupil; 50 have two; 100 have three; and 139 schools have four, these 818 schools totalling less than 1,000 pupils."

The annual cost of maintenance, said the Minister, was $780,000 francs—that is, about 4,000 francs per pupil per year.

NO ORDERS TO LEAVE

Rumours Denied On Chinese Vessels

Rumours current at a late hour last night to the effect that the local Government had issued instructions that the Chinese cruisers were to leave British waters before the expiry of 24 hours were denied by the officers-of-the-watch on both the Ning-hai and the Hal-chi. Neither had received any instructions from Nanking and no move will be made until some sort of communication arrives.

H.M.S. Defender was still in Kowloon Bay last night, despite the fact that the flying-boats from Singapore had already arrived. It was to assist these in finding their bearings that she anchored in the Bay.

They had met the two cruisers quite casually, the officer continued, and had asked them to return to Hong Kong so that they could become acquainted with each other.
This, it was explained, was quite a common custom in the Chinese Navy.

Lieut.-Commander Sik Ka-sing of the Ning-hai made a similar statement, also denying that there had been any firing from the Ning-hai, or that they had been sent from Nanking to bring the cruisers back. In spite of the fact that Waglen had reported the incident, he adhered to his original statement.

INVITATION DECLINED
Both L'Ouvreur and the Echo de Paris assert that M. Laval declined for the time being the British invitation to send French naval experts to London, since negotiations on this subject are not considered urgent by the French Government, which is keeping to the original French viewpoint that the various armament problems are inter-dependent and that the international naval conference to be held in London next year should deal with these problems.

Furthermore it is pointed out that the present moment is rather inopportune for the reopening of the discussion of the question of parity with Italy, since the "Franco-Italian friendship, although necessary, is nevertheless extremely fragile."

Mr. Eden, the paper adds, intimated to M. Laval that the British Government would not object to the French fleet corresponding to 60 per cent. of the British.

FIVE-HOUR WEEK FOR MINERS

limits the hours of work in lignite mines to a maximum of eight hours per day, or 48 hours week, which practically corresponds to a five-hour week.

NEW NOTE TO LEAGUE TO BE SHELVED?

Mr. Eden told pressmen that on his return to London after the deliberations at Rome he would advocate another talk with M. Laval in Paris, when doubtless the Italo-Abyssinian question could be discussed in the light of the various intervening conversations.

GREETED BY SQUALL WHEN LANDING

UNFORTUNATE MISHAP AT GANH RAY BAY

14 HOURS 20 MINUTES FLYING
TIME FROM SINGAPORE!

UNDER the command of Wing Commander
D. L. Scott, D.S.C., two Short Singapore III
Flying Boats of No. 205 Flying Boat Squadron,
Singapore, made a perfect landing in Kowloon Bay opposite Kai Tak Aerodrome shortly before 2 p.m. yesterday in the course of their experimental flight from their base.

The two boats are new machines which arrived in Singapore some three months ago, and are much faster and better than the Southampton Singapore Boats which originally formed the 205 Squadron.

"The weather was ideal all the way from Singapore and the only bad patch we struck was when about to land here, when we struck a squall," said Wing Commander Scott in an interview with the Sunday Herald yesterday, shortly after the arrival of the flight. He said that wherever they landed they had been greeted with the greatest courtesy, especially by the French authorities in Indo-China and in Annam.

"We left Singapore at 6.15 a.m. on Thursday last and made a sea crossing of about 400 miles to Pulau Condore, which is a group of islands off the coast of Indo-China. This was the first land sighted after leaving our base. We proceeded to Ganh Ray Bay, where we were met by the French sloop Marne and three French flying-boats which were sent by the French authorities at Saigon to meet us.

"It was while we were refuelling in Ganh Ray Bay that the incident in which one of our boats was damaged occurred, making us one day late on our schedule.
It was very unfortunate, as a sudden squall sprang up and the refuelling vessel was unable to prevent itself from colliding with No. 3594, damaging an aileron which had to be repaired.

"We motored to Saigon and were entertained by the authorities, and spent the rest of Thursday at Ganh Ray Bay.

"We left Ganh Ray Bay for Nha Trang, which is about 250 miles distant, and there we were met by the Resident French Commander, M. Destenay. Four of us motored 45 kilometers to the official residence, where we were entertained to dinner and where we spent the night. The remainder of the crew spent the night on the boats.

"Our actual flying time for the trip from Singapore was 14 hours and 20 minutes. This indicates the possibility that a trip from Singapore to Hong Kong within 48 hours by flying-boat can be easily accomplished, and is easily within the capabilities of these new boats."

Fit. Lieut. Bladen, who was carried as a passenger in Wing Commander Scott's boat, said that Group Captain Smith was originally supposed to have been in command of the two boats, but was taken ill suddenly and relinquished the responsibility to Wing Commander Scott.

BOUND FOR MANILA

"It was our original intention to fly back to Singapore via Manila and Labuan on Monday, but we have wired the Base for further instructions, as we have lost a day in repairs. We will probably spend four days in Manila and one night at Labuan, making a total trip of nine days."

The following comprise the crew of the two boats:—
No. 3594.— Commanded by Wing
Comdr. D. L. Scott, D.S.C., with F/O
G. Menzies as second-in-command and F/O J. T. Moore and five other ranked. Fit. Lieut. Bladen was carried as passenger.

No. 3592.— Commanded by Fit.
Lieut. L. S. Ricard, with F/O M. D.
Thurmer as second-in-command and Sergeant Pilot Robinson and four other ranks. Squadron Leader V. S.
Parker, D.F.C., A.F.C., was carried as passenger.

After a minor flurry the report was found to be without basis of fact.
